Happy Demon Rum.
The Whistling Moron.
Color for Rockefeller City.
Using Customers' Stocks In Short Sales.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE DEMON RUM will learn with pleasure that respectable Republicans are on his side, against prohibition.

Senator Dwight W. Morrow is mentioned among those expected to discuss prohibition in New Jersey, with the hope of bringing back legal beer to replace, or at least compete with, abundant bootleg whisky.

The mention of Senator Morrow will cause one non-loquacious citizen of Massachusetts to take notice.

WHEN 1936 ROLLS around the two conspicuous Republicans will be Coolidge and Morrow, unless conditions change. Not both can have the job that each has in mind.

Mr. Coolidge belongs to the prohibition era, now looked upon as mid-Victorian. Mr. Morrow, who swept New Jersey on a wet platform, belongs to the modern "prohibition is a crime-breeding failure," party.

Both parties will soft pedal prohibition and light beer and wine, in 1932, unless conditions become too bad. In 1936 there will be no soft pedaling, for the politicians will know what the people think.

Dr. C. G. SHAW, professor of philosophy at New York University, says:

"If men whistle, they usually are morons."

The learned philosopher, whom aimless whistling has doubtless annoyed, would, of course, make exceptions, in cases such as:

My Uncle Toby whistling "Lillibulero."

The young person acting on Burns' suggestion, "Oh, whistle, and I'll come to ye, my lad."

Homo alalus, Doctor Shaw's ancestor, who whistled before language was invented.

He trudged along unknowing what he sought,
And whistled as he went, for want of thought.

Darwin's book on the "Expression of the Emotions" gives interesting information on whistling, holding the breath, putting the hand on the mouth, etc.

Whistling, softly, may indicate concentrated thought, or bewilderment, free of any moron taint. A man may whistle to keep his courage up, and be no moron.

Dr. Shaw means that whistling annoys him, as cracking of coachmen's whips annoyed Schopenhauer.

A boy with a new dog, a new jackknife and a fishing pole, whistling on his way to the brook is the happiest of mortals, and no moron.

ROCKEFELLER CITY, a city within New York, in the heart of the Fifth avenue shopping section, will develop new ideas, made possible by the ability of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to plan an investment of $250,000,000 at one time.

There will be park spaces on the ground, between skyscrapers and tower buildings, and acres of parks, planted with tall trees, on the roofs.

And instead of plain dull brick surface, ugly red or dull gray, soon blackened with soot, the Rockefeller walls will have pastel hues, tan, pink, etc., whatever the experts may choose.

California has long since abandoned dull brick colors. Italy did the same, centuries ago, and Greece colored marble statues, in the days before Italy started.

Walter Chrysler, originator of "floating power," adorned his tower with brilliant rustless metal, and former Gov. Smith has done the same with the Empire State Building.

It will be interesting to see what Rockefeller City will develop.

NORWAY AND SWEDEN, adversely affected by Britain's temporary abandonment of the gold standard, followed suit, to avoid loss. Now Denmark joins the no-gold parity ranks, following Norway and Sweden.

The world hasn't lost its taste for gold, however. Somebody abroad managed to extract more than $51,000,000 of Uncle Sam's gold hoard on Monday, and more will follow.

GERMANY AND ITALY mean to maintain gold parity for their mark and lira, if they can. Russia makes her own rules for money, as for everything else, and you cannot tell what is happening or will happen there.

Uncle Sam's dollar, with $5,000,000,000 in gold and the richest country back of it, will become the international standard of value, if foolish fear doesn't upset us.

IVAR KREUGER, the Swedish industrial and financial genius, says he will pay the obligations of Kreuger and Toll, not in depreciated Swedish currency, but in American dollars.

President Hoover knows better than anybody else what harm has been done by Wall Street's short selling.

If he will put the Department of Justice to work on the problem of stopping short-selling conspiracies against value, he will do more to restore public confidence than could be done by spending $10,000,000,000 on stabilizing.

ABOUT SHORT SELLING, there are mysteries with which innocent lambs are not familiar.

They know that short selling

Harold Lloyd Saves Family in Fire

STAR RUSHES 3 CHILDREN TO SAFETY

Rescues Two Girls From Flames in Bathroom and Carries Out Baby Son

International News Service.

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 30.—The three children of Harold Lloyd, film comedian, were rescued unhurt by their father today when a fire broke out in the bathroom of the Lloyd ranch home here.

The fire was caused by a heating apparatus in the bathroom while Gloria Lloyd, 7, and her sister, Peggy, 6, were in the room preparing for school.

Their father, asleep in a nearby bedroom, was aroused by his daughter's screams, and rushing to them found that a lace curtain hanging over the heater had caught fire. He hurried the little girls from the house and carried out their baby brother, Harold, Jr., eight months old.

After extinguishing the fire, Lloyd took his two daughters to school and returned home to find the neighborhood excited by the fire because of the prominence and popularity of the comedian and his family.

Lloyd, with a smile, deprecated his actions.

The fire recalled a daring rescue in which Lloyd played a leading role in a studio several years ago when one of the dressing rooms became filled with gas.

Lloyd was almost blinded as he opened the door, but he fought his way to a couch, and carried out a youth who had been overcome by smoke.

Hemingway in U. S. For Visit of Stork

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Ernest Hemingway, famous author of books depicting the brittle "Lost" post-war generation of reckless, restless men and women, is to become a father. He was in New York today with Mrs. Hemingway, en route to Kansas City, having returned from abroad because he wanted his child to be born in America.

With the Hemingways arrived Donald Ogden Stewart and his wife, who also were expecting to become parents shortly. Stewart is the Los Angeles humorist.

Fog Blankets City; Temperature Rises

Fog blanketed the Pittsburgh district early today as the temperature fell to 48, with little air movement. Under the sun's rays the mist dissipated early and the mercury climbed rapidly, reaching the 70s this afternoon. Clear, mild weather will continue until late tomorrow, when cloudiness is predicted by Forecaster W. S. Brotzman.

Price of Milk Cut One Cent a Quart

A reduction of 1 cent in the retail price of milk, making the price 11 cents a quart, will be effective tomorrow. Estimated on July's consumption in Pittsburgh of 444,728 quarts daily, the price drop means a daily saving of $2,000 to consumers.

BUTLER QUITS MARINES

QUANTICO, Va., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler gave his last command to the Marine Corps today and was placed on the retired list.

The General's last command, given to Lieut. L. C. Whitaker, his aide, was:

"You may haul down my flag, sir."

With his eyes moist as his flag was hauled down from the post, Butler asked the men to sing "Sweet Adeline." They did and at its conclusion gave the general a rousing cheer.

All of his baggage was marked "Smedley D. Butler, Newtown Square, Philadelphia," for which place he left this morning by automobile. Although he retains the honorary title of major general in retirement, it has not been placed on his new stationery.

The last honor accorded the general was a salute of 13 guns.

IRENE'S BATTLE FOR PIGS FAILS

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin, "society's fashion plate," has lost her court fight to obtain better living conditions for pigs.

A jury found William Schroeder, farmer neighbor of Mrs. McLaughlin's, not guilty of cruelty to pigs. The former famous dancer preferred the charge after a personal investigation of Schroeder's pig sty.

Schroeder has been fined $10 but appealed the sentence. Mrs. McLaughlin was not in court when the decision was read, and the farmer said he had not decided whether he would sue his accuser for malicious persecution.

Paul Block and Wife Guests of Hoovers

Hungry Cripple Jailed For Stealing Food

Hungry, homeless and a hopeless cripple, Andrew Yake, 62, was arrested at Anderson and Lacock streets, North Side, early today, charged with the theft of a carton of bacon from a passing packing company truck. In broken English, Yake told police he stole that he might have something to eat, the first in days.

In North Side Police Court Yake was fined $5 or five days in the County Jail by Magistrate Ray E. Schneider.

Twenty years ago Yake was prospering as a coal miner working in Etna Mine No. 1, Pittsburgh Coal Company, near Irwin. All the money he could spare he put in a savings bank to bring his wife and children from the old country. There was an accident; weeks later Yake left a hospital—crippled for life.

Unskilled and hampered by his affliction, Yake told police he seldom found work. His savings dwindled and then his home went; with both went his hope of bringing his loved ones to his side. Recently his bed has been a park bench, his food whatever could be begged or found.

KANE HEARS CHARGE OF MOTHER

Witness Carried From Court In Hysterics; Says Couple Quarreled on Fatal Day

By DAVID P. SENTNER

International News Service.

HAMPTON, Va., Sept. 30.—Mrs. W. C. Graham was carried from the courtroom here today after an hysterical collapse brought to a close her testimony that she believed her son-in-law, Prof. Elisha Kent Kane, had deliberately drowned her daughter, Mrs. Jenny Graham Kane.

The grief-stricken mother's outburst temporarily halted the hearing of the professor, arraigned on a charge of murder.

When the hearing resumed, W. C. Graham, the dead woman's father, took the stand to substantiate his wife's story of quarrels and abuse. Mrs. Graham's collapse prevented her testifying about letters from Mrs. Betty Dahl, "other woman" in the case.

PROFESSOR CALM

The urbane professor, who teaches romance languages at the University of Tennessee and is a member of a prominent Kane, Pa., family, remained calm as he directed his battery of defense counsel. He was wearing a black necktie in mourning for his wife.

From her bed where she had been confined from a nervous breakdown, Mrs. Graham came to court and, between sobs, testified that her daughter and the professor quarreled the morning of the day Jenny was drowned.

She told how she found Jenny and the professor sitting on op-

Women Terrified In London Rioting

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—A noisy unemployment demonstration, terrifying women shoppers and culminating in an attack upon a fashionable horseman in Hyde Park, took place here today following arraignment of 11 men and one woman in Bow Street Court as a result of communist disorders before the houses of Parliament last night.

Edison Reported As Slowly Sinking

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Thomas A. Edison was slowly sinking today. His physician, Dr. Hubert S. Howe, visited the 84-year-old inventor this morning and after a lengthy examination said:

"Mr. Edison seems to have less interest in things, and his strength has failed somewhat during the past few days."

Artist's Rare Violin Crushed by Truck

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—How he could make his concert debut without his precious violin was the problem today confronting Harry Braun.

He dropped a Guarnerius instrument, made in 1691 and presented to him by August Heckscher, philanthropist, at Fifth Avenue and Forty-third street. A truck crashed the $25,000 violin.

Schooley's Dismissal In Kline Shakeup Seen

Clark Rumored for Post; Alderdice To Get Job

By MARK SHIELDS

Safety Director James M. Clark, immediately upon his return from Europe, will resign his position in the Kline cabinet and he appointed City Treasurer.

Councilman Robert Alderdice, defeated for renomination in the recent primary, will resign from Council at the same time and be named Safety Director as successor to Clark.

Traffic Magistrate William J. Soost, the only Kline councilmanic candidate successful in the primary, will be elected by Council to fill the unexpired term of Alderdice.

City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley will retire to private life.

This post-primary gossip is gaining a firm foothold in political circles with the present and past actions of the Mayor serving to give it credence.

Schooley failed to deliver his Eighth Ward to Senator James J. Coyne in the primary race for County Commissioner, and also failed to carry his ward for the Kline councilmanic slate. Admittedly he faced a desperate battle—sentiment in his ward being difficult to control—but the Mayor today is remaining friendly only Ammel will carry three passengers on the refueling flight to start from New York and the refuelings will be made over Moscow and Tokio, Miss Gale said.

TAX RECEIPT SCRUTINY INCLUDED IN PROBE

Park Studies Records of Board; Schad, McBride To Appear Before Jury

Judge James H. Gray today granted a petition by Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt asking authority to broaden the scope of the grand jury investigation into Allegheny County's vote frauds.

The order gives the jury the power to investigate charges of assessment and tax receipt frauds designed to "pad" the city and county voting lists. Under its original charge, the jury was limited to a survey of election law violations occurring at the September 15 primary.

Other highlights of the day included:

1—A petition asking the Returning Board to throw out all ballots of the First District of Forward Township, where, the petitioners charged, 322 out of 731 voters were given unlawful assistance in marking their ballots. The official count of the district gave County Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong 588 to 66 for Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, his rival for the second majority commissionership nomination.

2—District Attorney Park was studying the books and records of the Board for Revision and Assessment of Taxes, preparatory t ocalling Chairman George J. Schad and Secretary C. J. McBride before the grand jury.

3—Thirty persons were under arrest on election fraud charges, the result of private investigation by supporters of County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern, who claim existence of a plot to "count out" their candidate. (See Page 4.)

4—Twenty others were being sought today by Constable Fred Boehmer on warrants charging registration frauds, issued on informations filed by the Registration Commission.

5—Indictments, for immediate presentation to the grand jury, were being prepared today against the 18 persons named by the jurors in their first presentment yesterday.

6—The Returning Board passed the half-way mark of its official count, showing County

Engelsberg Asks End of Jail Term

Attorney Charles B. Prichard today filed a petition with Judge Nelson McVicar in Federal Court asking a rule to show cause why a six-months jail sentence for Joseph Engelsberg should not be suspended and Engelsberg paroled. Engelsberg, a politician of the Hill district, was sentenced in November, 1929, and also fined $2,500 when found guilty of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law.

Police Calm Excited Crowd Jamming Radio Show

Two radio cars filled with police called from Oakland Police Station to Duquesne Garden last night found crowds that packed the building breaking windows and struggling for the exits. Trouble subsided quickly an no one was hurt.

The excitement of the crowd, attending the radio-electrical show, started when two or three women, oppressed by the heat, fainted in the aisles as they moved toward the front entrance.

The Garden was crowded to capacity, according to Manager James A. Simpson, and people had difficulty moving in the aisles. Box office receipts showed a total of 42,000 persons admitted during the day. Simpson says:

"When the crowd became too big, I had to shut the doors. We turned thousands away. People were just a little anxious, that's all."

Motorcycle Patrolman George W. Geyer, stationed outside the building and one of the first policemen to enter during the trouble, said:

"I came into the front entrance and people were packed in there like sardines. Women and children were shouting and beginning to work themselves into a frenzy. I turned traffic the other way and broke open two big doors at the side. Everyone was forced out for a while, even if they didn't want to go.

"The crowd was kicking out the windows. They calmed down quickly when the air cooled a little and the crowd thinned out."

Party Solidarity War Cry Raises Hopes; Hard Fight In '32 Campaign Admitted

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Although President Hoover has preserved strict silence concerning Calvin Coolidge's dramatic self-effacement from all political consideration for 1932, the expectation prevailed in high Republican quarters today that a letter will very shortly go forward from the White House expressing Mr. Hoover's gratification to his predecessor.

It was rumored today that such a missive already has been sent, but the White House had nothing to say about it.

Publication of such a letter of course, would be tantamount to Mr. Hoover's announcement of his own 1932 candidacy. While no doubt exists in any quarter that the President will be a candidate to succeed himself, not by any public word or deed has Mr. Hoover announced it.

PARTY PLEASED

The more Republicans studied the Coolidge statement today the more they liked it—not so much because Mr. Coolidge eliminated himself—for many of them sincerely wished he would be available—but because Mr. Coolidge coupled with his gesture of renunciation a militant cry for party unity and solidarity.

Republican leaders of the practical, far-seeing sort are under no illusions about the party's chances in 1932. Irrespective of what they may assert with every show of confidence in their public utterances, they all realize and admit privately that they have a real fight on their hands next year. That fight will be infinitely more difficult if there is to be any serious disaffection in the ranks.

Party solidarity is absolutely essential, and it was for this party solidarity that Mr. Coolidge appealed.

DRAMATIC WAR CRY

The closing sentences of Mr. Coolidge's article in the current Saturday Evening Post constituted a simple and yet dramatic Republican war cry. He said:

"In an emergency like the present, the responsible elements of our party should offer a solid front in their support of the President.

"That is the course I propose to pursue."

Nothing could be more simply or more succinctly stated.

Phrased a little differently, Mr. Coolidge, in effect, said:

"Others (including, presumably, the Progressive Insurgents and agrarian discontents) may stray from the party fold, but I, Calvin Coolidge, propose to stand by the President."

Opinions of the various political elements concerning the Coolidge act were just about what was to be expected.

CLEARS ATMOSPHERE

Regular Republicans, like Senator Watson of Indiana, and Senator Fess, of Ohio, declared that it removed the last vestige of doubt concerning Mr. Hoover's renomination, and that it cleared the atmosphere for a vigorous and united Republican effort behind Mr. Hoover next year.

Republican Insurgents, like Senator Brookhart, of Iowa, and Senator Frazier, of North Dakota, who are openly in opposition to the administration, asserted it would not halt their search for "A real progressive candidate" to substitute for Mr. Hoover next year.

The Democrats gleefully proclaimed that Cal resigned his claims because he is politically smart enough to know that no Republican can be elected next year."

This epitomizes Washington's political reaction to the Coolidge announcement. Only the future can tell whose interpretation is correct.

SZE SUCCEEDS WANG IN CHINA

NANKING, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Dr. C. T. Wang, mobbed and seriously injured Monday by students who blamed him for failure to obtain the intervention of the League of Nations in the Sino-Japanese controversy in Manchuria, resigned today as foreign minister of the Nanking government.

Alfred Sze, Chinese minister to Great Britain and China's representative in the League of Nations, was named to succeed him.

Occupation of Southern Manchurian cities by Japanese troops and the subsequent rejection by the League Council of the Chinese appeal for intervention so weakened Dr. Wang's standing with leaders of the Kuomintang, dominant Chinese political party, that he found retention of office impossible.

Pending the arrival of Sze from Geneva, Frank W. Lee, American born Chinese and former minister of this country to Mexico, will act as foreign minister. He has been serving as vice minister of foreign affairs.

AS A MATTER of common decency, rare in or out of Wall street, the Stock Exchange should make it impossible for any broker to "lend it" for short sales, or other conspiracies against value, any stock of which he, THE BROKER, is not the absolute owner.

It might be a good idea for someone interested in the stock market to start suit against any broker lending a customer stock for short-sale purposes without permission.

JURY TO SCAN CANNON CASE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP)—District Attorney Rover announced today the District of Columbia grand jury would investigate charges that Bishop James Cannon, Jr. and Ada L. Burroughs, former treasurer of the Virginia Anti-Smith Committee, violated the corrupt practices act in the 1928 presidential campaign by failure to report certain expenditures.

The investigation will begin October 8. The attorney said a score of witnesses, including several bankers and officials of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, would be subpenaed.

It was described as necessary to expedite action in the case because the statute of limitations is about to expire.

Trading Ship Feared Marooned in Arctic

VANCOUVER, B. C., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Eleven passengers and the crew of the SS. Baychimo, Hudson Bay trading ship, are faced with the possibility of spending the winter frozen in Arctic ice at Seahorse Island, northwest of Point Barrow, said advices received here yesterday. The ship was bound from Vancouver with the season's fur trade cargo when she was caught in the ice.

SENATORS OPEN VOTE MACHINE PROBE HERE

Quiz on Tampering Asked; Efficiency of Devices in Luzerne Read Into Record

An investigation of the voting machine failure in Allegheny County at the primary election, September 15, was begun today by a Senate committee headed by Senator Frank J. Harris, on the seventh floor of the City-County Building.

Sitting with Senator Harris were Senators Joseph G. Armstrong, Jr., of Pittsburgh; John Howell, Lackawanna County, and Chauncey W. Parkinson, Greene County.

JUDGES TO BE CALLED

Harris announced that judges of election in the first four wards of Pittsburgh would be called and that hearings would be held in McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton, where trouble with the machines was experienced.

Hiram D. Hirsh, counsel for the Poole Engineering and Machine Company, of Baltimore, with which the county has a $1,000,000 vote machine contract, was the first witness. He recounted his dismissal of Edward L. Funk, a company repairman, after handles of several machines had snapped off. Funk later was exonerated by District Attorney A. T. Park. Aside from the handles breaking, there was only the normal amount of trouble necessitating readjustments, Hirsh said.

Prosecutor Park and Assistant District Attorney Roy T. Clunk testified as to their investigation, Funk's indictment and his subsequent release.

Senator Harris had written into the record a telegram from the commissioners of Luzerne County stating that 490 machines had been operated successfully in that county, aside from congestion in some districts. A recount was conducted in three and a half days, the message stated, at little extra cost.

ASK STATE INQUIRY

A motion for the presentation by a group of citizens of a petition to Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, asking that he examine all the voting machines used in the primaries in Allegheny County, was adopted yesterday by the Citizens Committee on Voting Machines.

The petition was signed by men and women active in the voting machine movement. Its signers include Arthur M. Scully, president of the Allegheny County Bar Association; Dr. J. W. Claudy, Francis S. Guthrie, Alexander Lindsay, Leo G. Griffith, Eliza Kennedy Smith and Louis D. McBride.

KLINE AX DUE FOR SCHOOLEY

Prime mover in the antagonism toward Schooley is Coyne, who has been bitterly opposed to the Treasurer for some time. The Senator's enmity was not cooled by the passive resistance Schooley offered to the anti-Coyne movement in the East End.

While Schooley has been a close friend of the Mayor, being reported as one of those who underwrote a note for $80,000 to guarantee the deficit of the Kline campaign of 1929, there is a precedent for tossing him overboard. His case parallels that of Dr. F. H. Frederick, of the North Side.

Frederick was another reported to have signed the note to raise funds to meet the deficit, but the Mayor went to war with him in the gubernatorial election last year, and in the recent primary continued the battle.

DEMANDS RECALLED

It will be recalled that on the Sunday before election the Mayor addressed a Twenty-first Ward meeting in which he demanded support for Coyne and William McLaughlin, Constable candidate of the administration. Coyne expected to carry the ward by 2,500, and eked out a bare 500 majority. For this deficit it is understood Ward Chairman William Herd, along with Frederick, is being held responsible, and is to be punished. It is considered significant that Herd was not present at the Sunday meeting, over which Councilman Harry Little presided.

Frederick did yeoman work in his latest clash with Kline, and McLaughlin may have been defeated, the official recount being necessary to decide the result, with a difference of not more than half a dozen votes either way.

Alderdice while as Safety Director, he would bring no political strength to the administration has something coming to him for his efforts to save the Mayor through preventing an investigation into the Supplies Department. He was Safety Director in the Babcock administration. Should he take the position again, practice, at least so far as the police department is concerned, probably would remain as it is with Chief of Police Peter P. Walsh the real executive.

Any cabinet changes involving the treasurership cannot be made until Clark returns. The city Treasurer also is treasurer of the Board of Education, and even a temporary vacancy would be undesirable.

PLAN NEW TICKET

Bound up with discussion of the Mayor's cabinet is the preparation of an independent County Commissioner ticket for the general election in the event the Returning Board finds that Commissioner Charles C. McGovern was nominated with Senator William G. Mansfield on the Republican ticket.

Independent circles have discussed a ticket comprising McGovern and former Senator C. M. Barr, though the latter prefers that McGovern accept Mansfield's invitation to run with the minority Commissioner, whether as independent or Republican. One report is that Gov. Pinchot has attempted to dissuade McGovern from an alliance with Barr. Some observers see in this the adroit work of Coyne, who is understood to desire that County Treasurer John Francies be McGovern's running-mate.

Meanwhile McGovern is not expressing himself as to a ticket, still clinging to the belief that he has been nominated as a Republican.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park said today a second list of indictment recommendations will be presented to the court before the grand jury adjourns on Friday. The October jury, he said, will take up the investigation where the present one stops.

Asked if he intended to go after any of the Big Shots in yesterday's 18 indictment recommendations, all were against lesser lights of the political armament—Park smiled and said:

"We are going after fraud wherever we can find it."

ASKS VOTES BARRED

The petition asking the votes of the First District of Forward Township be thrown out by the Returning Board was submitted to Judges George V. Moore and Elder W. Marshall by attorney representing Commissioner McGovern.

In making its startling charge that 332 of the 731 voters in the district were given assistance in marking their ballots, the petition averred:

That Henry Coker, John Fetchen, Tony Tignanelli and Mary Greco, voters, after entering the booths to vote, were beseeched by J. Patton Jr., Florence Rue and Mary Harrison to accept assistance and that George Pepka was in the booth marking his ballot when James Rue stepped into the booth without the knowledge or consent of the voter and marked a cross-mark for the ol... constable on said ballot.

That Lois Graff, superintendent of Sunnyside School, voted as a voter, was assisted because she could not see to vote, although, according to the petition, she is not troubled with her eyes and has voted unassisted in previous elections.

That Independent Republican watchers were ...led from polls.

That Katherine ...denskey, who did not vote, was ...rked as having voted.

That Floyd Bonnell, ...o was marked as having voted, charges he was refused admittance to the polls.

That Vincent Affinite and Anthony Affinite, residents of another district, were permitted to vote.

That Ray Porter, judge of elections, took two ballots out of the polling place and returned a short time ... and deposited ballot.

NAMED BY JURY

Those named in the grand jury indictment recommendations yesterday were:

HOMESTEAD — Albert Pryle, aiding the casting of illegal vote in the First District of the Third Ward and the Third District of the Third Ward; Jack Abbott, the same charge in the First District of the Fifth Ward.

WEST HOMESTEAD — Nick Whalen, aiding the casting of an illegal vote in the First District.

PITTSBURGH Twentieth Ward—Harry J. Walsh, Earl C. Cline, Alice J. Jennings, Ida Eisenber and Gertrude Shannon, members of the election board of the Ninth District, permitting persons other than members of the board to aid in counting the ballots. Michael Dugan, Early Anderson, Ray Engelhart, John Doe and Richard Doe, were named as the persons who illegally took over the board's duties.

FORWARD TOWNSHIP — Roy Porter, Robert Rue, Frank Pauley, John Sandy and Andrew Revetta, election board of the First District, conspiring to make a false return, wilful fraud and performing the duties of election officers so as to defeat the objects of the election law.

Weary Old Tramp Dies in Judge's Seat

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Weary of park benches, Thomas Haywood, 60-year-old itinerant, crept quietly into a police courtroom. He chose the Judge's chair for a bed and reclined for a comfortable night's sleep.

Today he was dead. The chair overturned backwards and Haywood plunged through a low window. His skull was fractured.

MAHATMA GANDHI AND CHARLIE CHAPLIN EXCHANGING VIEWS ON LIFE IN THE YEAR 1931

The friendly visit Screen Clown Chaplin paid the Mahatma, in London to champion the cause of his beloved India, and some of his disciples in the tiny quarters of an Indian physician. They exchanged their views, one modern, the other medieval, failed to agree.

Gandhi Threatens to Quit London, Sees MacDonald

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—The possible effect of Parliament's adjournment on the Indian round table conference today prompted Mahatma M. K. Gandhi, Indian Nationalist leader, to visit Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald at the House of Commons this afternoon.

Gandhi, who is to be interviewed over the radio at 2 p. m. on Saturday by Otto D. Tolischus, chief of the International News Service London Bureau, has threatened to return to India immediately new elections are announced.

Details of the conversation, however, were not revealed. Meanwhile, in a speech at Reading, Lord Burnham delivered a slashing attack upon the Nationalist leader as "Britain's worst enemy in India," and charged that Lord Irwin, former British viceroy to India, had failed in his negotiations with the Mahatma. He asserts:

"Lord Irwin is no match for Gandhi as a politician. Irwinism is the quintessence of feebleness, and if continued, we are bound to drift into chaos and disaster.

"Nothing disgusted me more than to read how large numbers of my fellow citizens did a poojah and made obeisance to Ghandi even when he was sitting with Charlie Chaplin on a barrow in London's East End. It surprises me that they do not feel ashamed."

'Moron' Whistling Sport Of Duce, Other Greats

ROME, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Premier Benito Mussolini is an excellent whistler with a good musical ear, his friends said today when they were told of an assertion by Dr. Charles Grey Shaw, professor of philosophy at New York University, that only morons whistle and great men never do.

When the premier was a newspaperman, his friends said, he used to do his whistling at the office, but now he whistles at home.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Whistling, an "unmistakable sign of the moron" in the opinion of Dr. Charles Gray Shaw, professor of philosophy at New York University, is indulged in on occasion by at least some of the world's great men. A survey showed today.

Einstein occasionally whistles, frequently fiddles.

Secretaries Wilbur, Brown and Hyde whistle at times. Representative Garner whistles, and so does Senator Vandenburg, of Michigan.

'BACK-TO-WORK' LEADERS SOUGHT IN TAXI STRIKE RIOT

BOMB HURLED INTO DRIVERS' MEETING

3 Hurt as Cabs Are Attacked After Tear Gas Routs 500 From Basement of Church

Jack Tate, leader of the back-to-work faction of taxicab drivers, and "Buck" McKelvey were being sought by police today following a riot last night when a tear gas bomb was hurled into a meeting of striking drivers in the basement of Old St. Patrick's Church, Liberty avenue and Seventeenth street.

Two others arrested at the scene, Thomas Corry, 38, of 1610 Locust street, and William H. Funk, 28, of 713 Arch street, a cab driver, were held over by Magistrate James J. O'Connor in Penn Avenue Police Court today, pending arrest of Tate and McKelvey.

POLICEMAN BURNED

The bomb was thrown just after the Rev. James R. Cox, pastor of Old St. Patrick's, finished addressing the strikers. Five hundred men, rushing to the street, bombarded a taxicab driven by Florence A. Barnes, of 1023 Brownsville road, and occupied by Patrick Smith, 40, of 1113 Carson street. The car swerved and struck a pole carrying high tension wires, causing a charged wire to dangle to the street.

Patrolman John J. Lyons, burned in attempting to remove the wire, and Barnes and Smith, injured in the crash, were treated at West Penn Hospital.

Police today testified Corry last night admitted that he and McKelvey had driven to the church with the intention of "breaking up" the meeting. Tate and McKelvey escaped in their car when Corry was arrested, it was said. Corry denied intent to disturb the meeting.

LODGERS OUSTED

Funk testified he was returning from taking a passenger to St. Francis Hospital when he ran into the melee. As a brick crashed through the window of his cab he leaped out and ran, he said. He was arrested as he was leaving the scene.

Lodgers in the church basement were compelled to sleep on cots outdoors last night because of the gas fumes.

Wilkins' Sub To Meet Grave In North Sea

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(Universal.)—Authority for the submarine Nautilus to be sunk in the North Sea was given by the Shipping Board yesterday with approval of Secretary of the Navy Adams.

Re-delivery of the vessel, now under charter to Lake and Danenhower for the recent explorations of Sir Hubert Wilkins, will be accepted at Bergen, Norway. Then the submarine will be sunk.

Action was taken on a request from the charterers indicating that great dangers would attend any attempt to recross the Atlantic with the vessel, the Shipping Board said.

The Nautilus had been designated for scrapping before it was chartered for the explorations.

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, who commanded the Wilkins-Ellsworth trans-Arctic expedition aboard the Nautilus in its cruise through the Arctic ice to within several hundred miles of the North Pole, arrived here revealing that he already plans another similar expedition, Sir Hubert said.

"I plan to make a new submarine expedition to the Pole, but not in the Nautilus, whose mechanical equipment was too complicated for my small crew. I shall build the craft on the simplest possible lines, and I believe I can safely reach the Pole. The results of the Nautilus expedition justified the risks and expense involved."

Grace Moore Lands With Spanish Mate

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Grace Moore, Tennessee opera singer, and her husband, Valentine Parara, whom she married recently in Cannes, France, arrived yesterday on the Ile de France en route to Hollywood, where they said they expected to make a motion picture together.

Parara, Spanish banker and actor, said they later expected to return to Spain and make a picture there.

Actress Will Marry Banker in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Lena Malena, German motion picture actress, and Wilmer Anderson, Beverly Hills banker, will be married today at the Hollywood Episcopal Church.

Miss Malena, in the application for a marriage license, said her name in private life is Elanore Ereth.

POLICE TRAIL TWO COLLINGS SUSPECTS

Hope Still Held That Body Found on Beach May Aid In Solution of Mystery

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—A new trail to two suspects in the weird Benjamin P. Collings pirate yacht murder today centered efforts of investigators in Westchester County.

Assistant District Attorney Munder, of Suffolk County, was to go there today to check up on two men who were under surveillance by police in the belief they might be connected with the killing.

Also there was still hope today that the body of the man found on Asharoken Beach near the scene of the murder may help in the solution of the mystery. District Attorney Blue of Suffolk County after an autopsy had been performed, was doubtful the body could have been that of the "wounded companion" of the murderers mentioned by Mrs. Lillian Collings in her story of how her husband was killed.

Apparently the body had been in the water two weeks or longer. A small hole in the cheek and a bruise at the base of the skull suggested the man had died from violence.

Mrs. Collings told authorities her husband's killers spoke of an injured man before murdering Collings. One theory was that the pirates had thrown him overboard from their boat and let him drown.

Frederick J. Voos of the Bridgeport Baseball Club, identified the blankets found in the craft in which the pirates abandoned Mrs. Collings after the killing as stolen from his yacht last month.

Another clue in the mystery had been discarded today. Investigators who went to Stamford, Conn., showed Mrs. Collings photographs of two men, a father and son, suspected of complicity in the killing. At first Mrs. Collings saw a resemblance between them and the pirate slayers, but later asserted she had never seen either man.

FORT NECESSITY MEMORIAL STARTED

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 30.—A shovelful of turf was turned yesterday from a green meadow "over the big mountain" from here, where Col. George Washington, Capt. James Mackey and a Colonist army built and lost Fort Necessity 177 years ago.

Orators, historians, leading political figures and 10,000 or more residents from Fayette County paid tribute to the memory of a man and a battle, and looked forward to a year to the day when the memorial to Washington costing $100,000 will be dedicated.

Ground was broken for the memorial to the 22-year-old Washington on the site of the Colonists' Fort Necessity, nine miles east of here on the National Highway. A chromium-plated spade was pushed into the soft soil by Frederick H. Payne, acting secretary of war. A drive for funds to erect the memorial is to follow, and next September 30, members of the committee hope a reconstructed Fort Necessity will be dedicated.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York and Col. Payne were the principal speakers at the groundbreaking with Gen. Richard Coulter, of Greensburg, toastmaster. Congressman Bloom, associate director of the United States Bicentennial Commission, reviewed the events of the battle which, he said, was the young soldier's first, and the one which started the fight for a United States of America.

Dr. King, Injured, Leaves Hospital

HARRISBURG, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Dr. Clyde L. King, secretary of revenue, who was injured in an automobile at Kingston, N. Y., while on his honeymoon, and later developed a severe case of pneumonia, has recovered sufficiently to warrant removal from the University of Pennsylvania Hospital to his home at West Town, Pa., it was learned.

415-Mile Gait No Thrill, Only Blur, Ace Says

CLASHOT, England, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Interrupting a game of shove ha'penny with colleagues in the Air Force barracks here, Flight Lieut. G. H. Stainforth paused long enough today to tell International News Service what it feels like to fly at almost seven miles a minute.

The modest British airman who established a new world's speed record of 415 miles an hour over the Schneider Cup course yesterday said he had difficulty in remembering what it was all about. He made it clear, however, that he treated the flight purely and simply as a service duty, devoid of "thrills," he said.

"The greatest difficulty was to keep my mind clear when diving onto the three kilometer course at seven miles a minute.

"It was impossible to make out landmarks. Everything was just a confused blur. The only way of overcoming this difficulty was to keep my eye fixed on a cloud-bank.

"I felt no bodily thrills and no ill effects. The speed was too terrific. I had no time to think or feel about anything."

In establishing the new mark, Stainforth shattered his own previous record of 379 miles an hour established during the last Schneider Cup races on September 12.

M'DONALD ENDS PARLIAMENT

By OTTO D. TOLISCHUS

LONDON, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—The British Parliament will adjourn its present session on Wednesday, October 7, Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons today.

At the same time, the Marquis of Reading, foreign secretary, announced the forthcoming adjournment in the House of Lords.

It was reported the Premier has decided upon an early general election. He will face the country at the head of a coalition bloc and ask the people to give him a "doctor's mandate" to cure the nation of its financial and economic ills.

BANDIT-MURDER CAR CRASHES, ONE KILLED

Two Others Hurt When Auto Speeding From Holdup And Slaying Hits Tree

WARREN, O., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—One of three men captured when their automobile was wrecked last night while fleeing from a speakeasy slaying and holdup died today.

The dead man was George Spraggins, 30, Cleveland. His two companions, George Barrett, 30, and John Davis, 30, also of Cleveland, were in a critical condition, and hospital attendants said there were no hopes for Barrett's recovery. He was the alleged driver of the holdup trio's machine.

The three, police said, had held up a place known as "Scotty's" and killed Earl Gamble, 40, of Warren, one of four patrons in the place.

Entering the place with guns drawn, the gunmen scooped up $40 from the cash register. As they did so, Gamble started for the front door. He was shot and killed.

The trio started for Cleveland, but had just passed the city limits when their automobile nicked another machine and was thrown against a tree.

Playmates Mourn Girl Dead of Burns

She died in St. Joseph's Hospital last night a few hours after her clothing caught fire from a gas stove.

Negro Minister Dies, Victim of Apoplexy

The Rev. Floyd A. Scott, 60, a Negro clergyman, died in his home at 2841 Center avenue, early this morning, according to a report to the coroner. The attending physician stated death had been caused by apoplexy.

Cermak Again Flays Municipal Judges

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Mayor Anton J. Cermak criticized Municipal Court judges again for alleged nonco-operation with his campaign against gambling. The Mayor charged that in five cases municipal judges have dismissed charges against persons charged with gambling "by picking technical flaws" in the warrants on which they were arrested.

Mayor Cermak's statement was in reply to charges by Judge Edward Casey that he had made a "vicious and unprovoked attack" on the judges.

LINDBERGHS FLY TO HANKOW

HANKOW, China, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh and Dr. Borcic, health expert of the League of Nations, arived here today, completing a flight from Wuhu, down the Yangtse River from Nanking.

Leaving Nanking yesterday on another volunteer flood survey flight, the Lindberghs and Dr. Borcic landed at Wuhu, where they spent the night. Failure of Nanking authorities to receive direct word of their landing there caused some anxiety this morning, but this was dispelled when a Chinese military plane sighted the Lindbergh craft on the water at Wuhu.

POLICE KILL 2 IN STRIKE RIOT

ESTEVAN, Sask., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—The fatal shooting of two strikers and the wounding of 12 policemen and 10 civilians in a riot between striking coal miners and constabulary brought a train load of Royal Canadian Mounted Police to Estevan today to preserve order.

For almost an hour last night police tried to stop 400 miners who paraded through the city despite police orders to the contrary.

The strikers formed outside the city limits. Policemen tried to block their entrances. The miners, armed with clubs, wrenches, pipes and stones, forced their way forward.

Girl Plans to Break Hawks' Havana Mark

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—A 26-year-old Brooklyn girl has decided to try to wrest one of Capt. Frank Hawks' speed records from him.

Miss Laura Ingalls, who recently abandoned a plan to fly the Atlantic, said she would take off soon on a round-trip non-stop flight between New York and Havana. She hopes to eliminate all stops, including Havana.

POLICE AWAIT VOTE CHARGE HEARING

Election Officials, Deputy Sheriff Among Scores Arrested in Roundup

Policemen, constables, a deputy sheriff, election officials and others are among the scores who are awaiting hearings today before Alderman Louis C. Wicks, of Oakland, on charges of violating the election laws. The roundup of the alleged vote law violators was conducted by constables from Wicks' office. Those arrested were from McKees Rocks, Forward Township, Homestead and the city.

Albert Rodgers, a deputy sheriff, was arrested, accused of helping to count ballots in the Second District of the Fifth Ward. He was not a member of the election board.

From McKees Rocks, William Meisner, Constable Joseph Bertis, Board Inspector Max Malinko, special patrolman Michael Legosh, Constable and Alex Jednik, an assistant of the board, were arrested. Meisner, Malinko and Legosh were charged with infinite double votes. The others are charged with penciling ballots. They were from the First District of the Second Ward of the borough.

The election board of the First District of Forward Township was arrested, accused of permitting others to fraudulently vote. Those accused of intimidating voters are Constable James Rue and Clarence Ida Catherine and Alex Rue. The board is composed of John Sander, Andrew Rafetta, Ray Porter, Robert Rue and Frank Pauley.

Patrolman James Davies, Walter Murphy and Thomas Gillespie, Homestead police officers, were among those arrested from that borough. Gillespie was charged with violating the election laws in the First District of the Fifth Ward, Homestead. The two others were charged with soliciting votes and intimidating voters in the Second District of the Fifth Ward.

Edward Morgan, judge of election in the Second District of the Fifth Ward, Homestead, is charged with neglecting his duties as a judge by soliciting votes and passing campaign literature.

C. J. Grolich was charged with voting in Homestead, when he was not a resident of that borough. Frank Glaser, of Brandock, is charged with repeating. Saul Roth, a special policeman, was charged with being within 100 feet of a voting poll and with having solicited votes. Michael Cooper was arrested for counting ballots when he was not a member of the board.

ARRESTED IN TAXI STRIKE RIOT

UNCOVER LOOT, 5 BOYS HELD

The discovery of a cache of alleged stolen articles under the Lacock Avenue Bridge netted the police a large quantity of jewelry when they searched the hillside. Today in Morals Court two boys, both aged 16, were held for further hearing by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones. They, with three boys now held in Juvenile Court, are alleged to have robbed the residence of Mrs. Grace Wilson, 918 Washington boulevard, and L. A. Gray, 6761 Thomas boulevard, of jewelry, silverware and a camera. Curtis McCloy, 39, of 1389 Washington boulevard, who is alleged to have purchased a camera from one of the boys, was held over on a suspicious person charge.

KLINE DELAYS POLICE AXING

The axing of Mayor Charles H. Kline's ax on police who failed to deliver at the primary election anticipated for today failed to materialize. It was said changes and removals might not be made until next week instead of the first of the month.

Formal dismissal of Inspector Joseph Eisner of the Strip was anticipated as the first major move.

Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh forwarded a list of changes in the bureau of Mayor Kline last week with the expectation that it would be returned today to be made effective tomorrow. Today Walsh said the list had not been returned and it might be next week before the changes were made.

• • The only low-priced radio with a *4-GANG CONDENSER

Only Zenette, among low-priced radios, has 4-gang condensers. Not even all high-priced radios have them. 4-gang condensers cut out annoying cross-talk and riging-in. Before you buy any radio make sure it has a 4-gang condenser.

In all radio history . . . never such value, never such quality, never such exclusive features as the NEW super-Zenette offers. Unless a radio has all Zenette's features . . . especially the 4-gang condenser . . . it cannot perform like Zenette. Before you buy any radio that falls short of Zenette performance, hear Zenette . . . then buy it and enjoy it as you would a high-priced radio. • • • • • •

only $49.95 TABLE MODEL $69.95 LOW BOY $79.95 HIGH BOY COMPLETE with Zenith Quality Tubes

Twin sizes—and double bed sizes. Plaid blankets in pastel shades. ALSO FINE WHITE BLANKETS — WITH COLORED BORDERS.

There are blankets and blankets. But only one St. Marys quality blanket. They stand in a class by themselves. These blankets may have a small thread here and there which may have pulled through into another color of the design—or on to the reverse side, this does not affect the quality or the appearance. Finest quality blankets through and through. Also included are 120 pairs of blankets in types that are being discontinued this year by the St. Marys mill.

The majority of these blankets are one and two of a kind—therefore we cannot accept mail or phone orders!

DEMOCRATS WIN HOUSE SEAT

SEDALIA, Mo., Sept. 30.—(AP)—Hopes of the Democrats that they might be able to control the next House of Congress soared today as nearly complete returns from yesterday's special election in the Seventh Missouri Congressional District showed an overwhelming victory for Robert D. Johnson.

Johnson, a Marshall attorney, won from his Republican opponent, former Representative John W. Palmer, of Sedalia, by approximately 9,000 votes. Johnson's victory gave the Democrats 214 seats in the House, the same number as now held by the Republicans. One seat is held by a member of the Farmer-Labor party.

Introducing Contrast
Pattern 1970
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

By ANNE ADAMS

Simplicity is still the rule in frocks for youngsters. This dainty model adds flare to the skirt with pointed gores which also repeat the color contrast introduced at neck and drop-shoulders. Printed cottons, challis, jersey and wool crepe are favored fabrics that will stand much hard wear. The original of Pattern 1970 was made of brown challis and trimmed with a brown tan and green print.

Pattern 1970 may be ordered only in sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 4 requires 1½ yards plain and ½ yard printed fabric. Yardage for every size and simple, exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

Send 15 CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each pattern. Write plainly your name, address and style number. BE SURE TO STATE SIZE WANTED.

Send for the FALL and WINTER CATALOG. It features the newest in afternoon, sports and house dresses, lingerie, pajamas and kiddies' clothes. Also delightful gift suggestions in accessory and transfer patterns. PRICE OF CATALAG, 15 CENTS. CATALOG WITH PATTERN, 25 CENTS. Address all mail and orders to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, Pattern Department, 243 West Seventeenth street, New York City.

1.—Enclose 15 cents in coins.

Wills for Township Estates Probated

The $30,000 estate of Nancy D. Peebles, Ross Township, under her will probated in the Register's office, was left to Mary A. Laughlin for a life estate and then, after a $3,000 bequest as an endowment fund for the Highland Presbyterian Church near Perrysville, the estate is to be divided equally between Mary C. Over, Catherine S. Over, Frank O. Over and Catherine S. Cornelius.

Joseph Herenski, Harrison Township, left his $17,000 estate to his wife, Martha Harenski, for life or until her remarriage, when one-third would go to her and two-thirds to their 10 children.

EPISCOPALIANS SET TO ADJOURN

DENVER, Col., Sept. 30.—(AP)—The adoption of a new matrimonial canon was cited as a major achievement of the fiftieth triennial convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church as delegates prepared to wind up their business today and adjourn.

The canon, tinged with liberalism, and representing the first drastic change in the rules of the church on marriage and divorce since 1808, was indorsed by the convention yesterday. It resulted from a compromise in plans advanced by the House of Bishops and the House of Clerical and Lay Deputies.

Persons who have been divorced and remarried in contravention to the law of the church are given cognizance in the new canon. With the approval of ecclesiastical courts operating through the bishops, they may retain their communicant status and be admitted to baptism, confirmation and holy communion.

State Experiments With Luminous Auto Plates

The State Bureau of Motor Vehicles at Harrisburg is experimenting with a new type of license plates which may be used in 1933. On a background of black, letters and figures are painted in silver and coated with luminous material similar to that used on some watches.

The figures may be made of reflector glass which will be illuminated by the lights of approaching automobiles, according to W. C. Price, superintendent of the state highway patrol.

Former Pittsburgh Steel Man Dies

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Harry H. Effern, 45, former Pittsburgh district steel man and for the past five years a district engineer with the Wheeling Corporation, died at his home here yesterday, following a lengthy illness.

$10,000 FEE CASE AIRED

Differences between President Judge William M. Parker, of Orphans' Court of Venango County, and Attorney Q. D. Hastings, of that county, during a will contest by relatives of Dr. John K. C. Crawford to prevent his $73,000 estate going to French orphans came before the Pennsylvania Supreme Court here yesterday.

Hastings appealed from an order allowing him a $4,000 fee, contending he should have been allowed $10,000, the fee asked for him by the French Embassy, for successfully fighting the contest and obtaining the funds for the orphans.

Metal Milk Caps Given Approval

Dr. Charles B. Maits, city Director of Health, today indorsed the new silver seal aluminum cap inaugurated by the Liberty Dairy Products Company.

PARIS CHEERS LAVAL, BRIAND

PARIS, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Welcomed back to Paris like conquering heroes, Premier Pierre Laval and Foreign Minister Aristide Briand received congratulations today upon the steps taken in Berlin for establishing a policy of economic co-operation between France and Germany.

Thousands at the railroad station cheered the returning statesmen, the crowd becoming so large police had difficulty in opening a lane for the ministers' motor cars.

Both Laval and Briand declared they were satisfied with the results of the Berlin conference with Chancellor Bruening and Foreign Minister Curtius, of Germany, and expressed confidence a new era of understanding between the two countries was at hand.

Premier Laval began making immediate plans for his visit to President Hoover in Washington, hoping to get away within the next two weeks.

CAREFULLY CHOSEN BLANKETS ARE A REAL DELIGHT TO THE WOMAN WHO OWNS THEM...

These new Esmond All-Wool Blankets are the nicest we have had in a long time. They are soft and beautiful—of the finest wool.

Being Esmonds they are made a new way—the Pelage* way—which gives them extra warmth without added weight.

The exquisite shades of Esmond Blankets will add soft touches of becoming color to your bedroom. And, because they are Esmonds, they are double-woven — another advantage, since two blankets are really woven into one single length blanket. Wide silk reversible bindings match the blankets.

WINNERS TO GET SAFETY HONORS

Bronze plaques will be presented to group winners and certificates to 46 no-accident plants by Frank L. Duggan, president of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council, in a meeting of representatives from more than 200 industries participating in the first inter-plant safety contest, in the Council chamber, City-County Building, tomorrow evening. E. F. Blank, Jones & Laughlin Steel Corporation, chairman of the contest, will preside.

George H. McClain, Aliquippa Works, will discuss practical ways of arousing and maintaining interest in a safety contest. H. F. Webb, West Penn System, and C. E. Ralston, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, also will speak.

Group winners are: McClane Mining Company, Meadowlands, Pa.; Liberty Baking Company, Pittsburgh; Union Limestone Company, Hillsville; Enterprise Stamping Company, McKees Rocks; Pittsburgh Steel Company, Monessen; Russell Burdsall & Ward B. & N. Co., Coraopolis; H. H. Robertson Company, Ambridge; Monessen Southwestern Railroad, Monessen; Pittsburgh Steel Products Company, Monessen; Canfield Oil Company, Coraopolis; Duplate Corporation, Creighton, and Harbison-Walker Refractories, Hays Station.

STRIKE ENDED BY CARPENTERS

Carpenters have returned to work on all jobs on which they had struck in sympathy with electricians, according to union headquarters. Agreement was reached with the contractors through a representative of the international headquarters of the carpenters' union. The men return under the same conditions which existed prior to the walkout.

Members of Local No. 5 Brotherhood of Electrical Workers are still on strike on jobs held by the members of the Allegheny County Electrical Contractors Association. An independent union of electricians numbering about 150 men has been formed and is working for members of the association.

Homestead School Opens Auto Course

Two new courses are being offered in the Homestead Public Evening School. Sessions open Wednesday evening, October 7. The first course, auto mechanics, consists of actual demonstration in dissembling and assembling automobile parts, greasing, changing oil, care of battery, cooling system, tightening and checking engine troubles, fuel and lighting systems. The other course, for drivers, is especially adapted for women.

THE BEST PLACE TO SHOP, AFTER ALL

Beginning Tomorrow

October Sale of COATS

$48 $88
$118 $138

Because the coat is the chief consideration of a woman's winter wardrobe, the Annual Coat Sale commands our supreme effort in style and value getting. It is Horne's at its best, and well-dressed women, as a class, recognize this fact.

All of the coats have been chosen within the last three weeks. The styles and fabrics, therefore, are new in the most accurate sense of the word. They stress the smartest fashion features of the recent Paris openings, including copies and adaptations after Vionnet, Molyneaux, Chanel, Lelong, Goupy, Martial et Armand, Paquin and other foremost couturieres.

We have made a special point of fabrics and furs which are the distinguishing features of this year's coats. Here the traditions of Horne quality and reliability are impressively evidenced. The beautiful new uneven-surfaced Forstmann weaves are given their deserved importance, and the furs are the best, and offer all the wanted varieties.

There are complete size selections at each price—women's, misses' and half sizes that make special provision for small women. The values reflect the opportunities of today's lower costs, together with the closer markings which have been made for this occasion.

WIFE'S MOTHER ACCUSES KANE

posite sides of the bed on the morning before they went to the beach. She sobbed:

"They didn't speak at breakfast. And then I told her she didn't have to go to the beach even if Sashy the professor insisted.

"And the poor little thing looked at me as if to say—'Mother, mother, please don't let me go'—but she went."

CARRIED FROM ROOM

At this point Mrs. Graham became hysterical and pressing her handkerchief to her tear-streaked face, cried out:

"My precious, precious Jenny went away and she never came back.

"How can I ever live without my child, my little Jenny."

The court stopped the hearing as attendants carried Mrs. Graham from the courtroom.

The father of Jenny was then called. He spoke quietly but with a tremble in his voice. He said:

"On the day she was drowned, Jenny certainly did not want to go away from the house. She seemed to have a dread or fear of something."

CORONER TESTIFIES

Coroner George T. K. Vanderslice, the first witness, reiterated his belief that Mrs. Kane was murdered.

On cross-examination conducted by Kane's cousin, E. Kent Kane, of Bradford, Pa., Dr. Vanderslice said he did not perform an autopsy because he at first thought the body would be sent to Tennessee for burial. He later wrote a second death certificate listing homicide as the cause of the death.

He said Graham asked that the investigation be abandoned because his daughter's troubles were over and because of the illness of Mrs. Graham.

The witness said fishermen near the scene of the tragedy told him they heard screams, but paid no particular attention because they were used to a "great hullabaloo on the beach because of drunken parties."

COURT CROWDED

Asked why he changed his first verdict from "accidental drowning" to "homicidal drowning," the Coroner related the story told him by Prof. Kane.

"He told me he was swimming 200 or 300 yards from the rocks when his wife either slipped or fell, screaming, into the water. The professor told me his wife screamed so pitifully he himself screamed for help to some fishermen in the vicinity.

"He told me that when he finally got to her he had some trouble with his wife, and that they were in eight feet of water, and that he managed to get her to shore only after great difficulty."

The small courtroom was jammed with spectators, the large majority of whom were women. Dr. Evan O'Neil Kane, 71-year-old father of the defendant, of Kane, Pa., sat behind his son.

Auto Tire Burner Told By Judge to End Nuisance

When a junk dealer takes to burning automobile tires and other rubbish in his back yard, it's time to call a halt, according to Gertrude Moichen, of 189 Beaver street, Leetsdale. Following her appeal to Judge James H. Gray in Criminal Court yesterday, Judge Gray ordered Jake Roscoff, of the same address, for one year to abate a nuisance.

If the smell of burning rubber continues to curl its smoky way into the nostrils of the community, Jake must go to jail, the Judge decided.

COUNTIES WAR IN POISON CASE

LEBANON, Ind., Sept. 30.—(INS.)—The trial of Mrs. Carrie Simmons, 48, charged with murder in connection with the poison deaths of her two young daughters, today threatened to resolve into a battle between two counties.

Mrs. Simmons' neighbors in Hancock County believe her to be innocent. They harbor a grudge against officials of Boone County, where the girls ate poison-loaded sandwiches at a picnic. The Boone County officials hope to send Mrs. Simmons to the electric chair.

It was reported that a number of Hancock County officials had banded together to work for Mrs. Simmons' acquittal. It was said that most of the members of this "committee" came from a neighborhood where the Ku Klux Klan once flourished.

Catholic Charities Appoint Flannery

WILKES-BARRE, Pa., Sept. 30.—J. Rogers Flannery, of Pittsburgh, today was appointed a member of the executive committee of the Catholic Charities of the United States at the closing session of the national conference here. James F. Murphy, of Detroit, was elected president and the Rev. Msgr. James H. Ryan, rector of Catholic University at Washington, honorary president.

SEES GAMBLING 'PROTECTED'

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Professional gambling could not exist in New York City if it were not protected by "politicians and others," Ezekiel E. Keller, retired police lieutenant and former police expert in dealing with gamblers, told the Legislative Investigating Committee today.

Samuel Seabury, counsel to the committee, elicited this opinion at the conclusion of Keller's testimony about gambling raids in political clubs, so that, he said, the committee might make constructive suggestions to the Legislature.

When Keller was excused, Philip D. Hoyt, first deputy police commissioner, was placed on the stand to bear out the contention of Democratic members of the committee that Mayor Walker supported the efforts of the late Joseph A. Warren when police commissioner to suppress professional gambling in Democratic clubs.

Fliers Link Planes To Dirigible in Test

LAKEHURST, N. J., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Two army aviators last night made the first successful contacts with a cruising dirigible at night when they hooked their planes onto the navy airship Los Angeles.

The fliers, Lieut. D. W. Harrigan, squadron commander of the five planes that will operate from the new airship Akron, and Lieut. H. L. Young, said they were practicing the maneuver so they could accomplish it without difficulty when the Akron comes East.

SALVATIONISTS LAUNCH DRIVE

More than 2,000 workers throughout Allegheny County tomorrow will formally launch the campaign for $112,500 which the Salvation Army needs to carry on its work in this district during the coming year. Fifteen hundred women and several hundred men, representing church, society and club circles and business and professional life, will help raise the fund.

Workers will visit homes, offices and stores to ask for contributions. Each solicitor will wear a badge and carry a receipt book bearing the name of George E. Alter, chairman of the campaign committee.

A'S, CARDS EAGER FOR FRAY

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

CARDS STRONG AT FORMER WEAK SPOT

AMONG OTHER THINGS pointing to a better world series showing by the Cardinals this year than in 1930 is the probability that there will be a vast improvement in the hitting of Jim Bottomley. During the title debate a year ago, Bottomley, it will be remembered, was one of the biggest busts in all the list of world series disappointments. In 22 times at bat in the six games played he made only one hit, and a normal .300 sticker wound up the series with the feeble average of .045.

Jim Bottomley

The Cardinal first baseman virtually set a new low in world series batting by striking out nine times. Two men have fanned 10 times in the classic but they played in a greater number of games. Like Bottomley, too, oddly enough, both were first sackers. One was Bill Abstein, playing for the Pirates against the Tigers in 1909, and the other was George Kelly, playing for the Giants against the Yankees in 1921. But Abstein played in seven games and Kelly in eight, whereas Bottomley was in only six.

BOTTOMLEY'S BATTING LAPSE was all the more costly to the Cardinals because he was occupying the cleanup notch in the batting order. His presence there caused the Redbirds to present their weakest spot just where they needed their greatest strength. Not until the sixth and final game, when it was too late to do any good, did Manager Street attempt to remedy matters by dropping him from fourth place to seventh.

But if Sunny Jim's form during the latter part of the regular 1931 season is any indication, he may look like a different player in the series starting tomorrow. After regaining his first-base job when Jim Collins was injured, Bottomley swung into the best stride he had shown in a couple of years. He finished practically in a tie with Chick Hafey and Bill Terry for the National League batting championship with an average of .348, and in general respects appeared to have taken a new lease of life. He ought to be far better this time than in 1930, and the promised change cannot fail to be of great help to the Cardinal cause in general.

AS A RULE the most desirable players in the minors are sold or covered up before drafting time arrives, but occasionally a real star in the making has been picked up in the draft by the major league clubs.

That's the way the Phillies got Grover Alexander and Phil Collins, the Cubs got Hack Wilson, the Pirates once got Urban Faber and the Tigers got Lu Blue. Among others to come up in the same fashion were Dolf Luque, Sam Gray, Jack Quinn, Clarence Mitchell, Earl Webb, Virgil Davis and Bill Hargrave.

THE POSSIBILITY OF some future stars being drawn always lends interest to the draft, and the 1931 letters, to be held in St. Louis tonight, will be no exception. The better known players who are subject to draft include Art Shires, Alex Metzler, Clyde Manion, Marty Hopkins, Johnny Prudhomme, Tom Angley, Charley Wilson, Herman Bell, Paul Florence, George Fisher, Andy Cohen, Ken Strong, Dave Barbee, Win Ballou, Homer Summa, Cores Selph, Monse Clabaugh and Walter French.

Jimmy DeHart

A PITTSBURGHER JUST back from Lexington, Va., where Jimmy DeHart is again coaching Washington and Lee, reports that the old Pitt four-letter star is working out a new football system which, if successful, will make Jimmy one of the most talked-about coaches in the country.

DeHart is developing a style of offense that is a variation of the Warner system. Though based on the latter, it is a radical departure in the main, and differs vastly from the methods of attack adhered to by Pop himself, Jock Sutherland and other mentors of the same school.

UNDER THE ORIGINAL Warner system the attack functions most effectively against the weaker side of the opposing line. It does not work so well against the strong side. Even as improved and broadened by Sutherland, the Pitt offense is said to have two blind spots, figuring that there are eight points of attack in the enemy forces.

DeHart, playing a wider line attack than either Warner or Sutherland, has devised a system whereby equal pressure will be applied against every single position. It will not depend on the opponents' weak side for success, but, if Jimmy has calculated correctly, will be equally effective at all eight points of attack.

DEHART SAYS THE new system has worked out in promising style as far as he has tried it, and he has every hope that it will prove a success. The former Panther, who is playing a return engagement at Washington and Lee after coaching for a time at Duke, is confident of building a winning machine within a reasonable period. He has a squad of 30 players, several of them hailing from the tri-state district. Strangely enough, there are only three Virginia boys among the 30 gridders. Jimmy finds one difference between northern and southern college players. He says those in the North are more mature, being a year or two older than the southerners, whose average age when they report to a coach as varsity candidates is 18 to 19.

AMONG THOSE WHO see a chance for Benny Leonard in the attempted comeback which he will start with a 10-round bout against Vittorio Livan, a middleweight, in Boston tonight is Ray Arcel, who has been helping Teddy Hayes train Benny. He figures that Leonard has to be only one-third as good as he was in his prime to beat most of the middleweights of today.

"When Benny was ruling the lightweight roost there were great fighters to dispute his title, such as Tendler, White, Kansas, Mitchell, Welling and others," Arcel said. "Name any division that has an array like that today. Leonard spent two months at light exercise, then two at hard work. Now all he needs is two fights to toughen him and he's ready for the wars."

PAUL REIDER, lightweight Panther speed king, still is Jock Sutherland's choice for the job of trying for point after touchdown, despite his weak efforts along that line in the game against Miami, which opened the Stadium season last Saturday.

Reider is far from being a poor placement kicker, his work in the practice sessions having been pleasing to the Pitt mentor. Paul was consistently good then, and it is hard to explain his lapse against the Ohioans.

Paul Reider

IT MAY HAVE been due to the fact that Reider was tired from running all over the field with the ball under his arm and was still puffing when it came time to try for the extra point on the occasion of each touchdown. Paul, incidentally, though playing right halfback, the position usually assigned to the best blocking back on the team, is also as great a ball-carrying threat as his running mate, Warren Heller. Reider's lack of weight has not handicapped him in the matter of taking an opposing tackle in or out, as the occasion demands. Rather a nice break for Coach Sutherland, who thus has a good blocker and also a running back all in one small package.

TARTANS WORK ON OFFENSIVE; PITT LEAVES

Duquesne University will have its full strength to meet the Stormy Petrels of Oglethorpe University Friday night at Forbes Field. Paul Abele, veteran right end, is expected to be back in the going today, giving the Duke coach a full roster. The Night Riders will need all of their manpower for the big Southerners, however, and Layden is maintaining his first-line drills until the game. Abele did not play in either of the past two games, having a leg injury.

Further development of the newly uncovered passing attack in the rooftop work on the Bluff, White Head Coach Elmer Layden schools his backfield proteges and Joe Bach, line coach, is working on his line. Bach came back to the Bluff with some rather startling information concerning the abilities of the Oglethorpe gridders, and so the Dukes will take no chances.

USE VARIED SYSTEM

Coach Harry Robertson will get an opportunity to play his Stormy Petrels against the Notre Dame system this week-end, and it will be interesting to see what results are obtained. Robertson has expressed a desire for an opportunity to meet a team using the lore of the late Knute Rockne. The Southerners use a combination of systems, combining Robinson's ideas with the wing backs of Pop Warner and Chick Meehan's shifting line.

The Oglethorpe team probably will arrive in this city Friday in order to have the advantage of a workout at Forbes Field the morning before the game.

Rumored negotiations for a game next season between Duquesne University and Washington-Jefferson have been declared as being without foundation by athletic heads of both institutions.

William Theuter, W. & J. graduate manager, stated that he had taken part in no arrangements of the sort, while Elmer F. Layden, director of athletics at Duquesne, said that nothing has been done in that direction.

TECH WORKS ON OFFENSE

Feverish efforts to snap up Carnegie Tech's offense for the Tartans' home opener with W. & J. at The Stadium Saturday mark the work of Bob Waddell as he prepares a weakened Skibo squad for the nineteenth meeting of Scots and Presidents.

Always noted as an offensive ball club, Carnegie showed little of deceptiveness and almost nothing of power in tallying only four touchdowns last Saturday against the University of Buffalo.

Despite the last-minute loss of Croft and Burrio, and the mid-game injury of Henry Dreshar, the Skibos were impregnable on the defensive in their opener, but even that meant little for Buffalo had no offense to test a major club.

The Tartan coaches, however, will have to take a chance on their defense despite the fact that Kebe and Sample are the only available experienced guards, for the offensive shortcomings in the opener were so palpable that unless there is a marked improvement in Tech methods of advancing the ball they will never get anywhere against such opposition as W. & J. is expected to present.

With an eye to taking care of the guard situation, however, Siegel and Jones, formerly listed as centers, have been getting some work at the guard positions.

SUN-TELEGRAPH SET FOR SERIES

The stage is set for the opening of the World Series tomorrow and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph as usual is set to give the fans the best of coverage on the blue ribbon event of baseball.

Charles J. Doyle, staff baseball writer, left last night with Manager Jewel Ens of the Pirates for the opening scene of action in St. Louis, and his stories will carry all of the latest developments in the way of news and features.

Connie Mack, manager of the World Champion Philadelphia Athletics, Mickey Cochrane, his star catcher, Babe Ruth, the game's outstanding playing personality, Nick Altrock, the famous baseball humorist, and a large staff of other special writers also will give their views of the series daily.

A World Series extra will appear on the street immediately after each game, containing complete story of the game and a box score. The best pictures obtainable also will be published.

AND FOR THE STAY-AT-HOMES THERE WILL BE THE LARGE ELECTRIC SCOREBOARD LOCATED ON THE GRANT STREET SIDE OF THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH BUILDING AT THE CORNER OF STRAWBERRY WAY. TAKE UP YOUR PLACE THERE DAILY AND ENJOY THE CONTESTS AS THEY ARE REPRODUCED PLAY BY PLAY.

BABE COMPARES SERIES TEAMS

By BABE RUTH

Baseball's Highest Salaried Player

As I wrote in the first article of this series, it is not my plan to compare the members of the Philadelphia and St. Louis clubs position for position with the idea that this will determine which team should win the series. Such comparisons always are interesting, I will admit, but I do not believe they actually prove anything. Players who have been classed as inferior to others have been the outstanding stars of other World Series and it frequently has happened that a player who stood out generally over another has been completely outplayed during a series.

Babe Ruth

I prefer to consider the teams by departments, rather than by positions. For instance, I like the Cardinals infield better than that of the Athletics, even though the A's infielders have days when it seems nothing can be hit through them. But I think the combination of Bottomley, Frisch, Gelbert and Adams shapes up as a better quartet in both fielding and hitting than he infield of Foxx, Bishop, Williams and Dykes.

SIMMONS OUTSTANDING

In outfield strength I think the A's excel their National League rivals. Simmons and Haley are the chief clubbers and Al, I am sure, is more dangerous than

In the case of Sprague vs. Roberts, after trial in the lower court, the lawyers' arguments were limited to two minutes, only three witnesses were called, and Judge Brennan then charged the jury—"Go." The jury was out only five minutes to reach a verdict of no cause of action.

THE ROOKIE'S CHANCE

Thoughts of rookies bold remind us
Of our chance to cop some fame;
And departing leave behind us

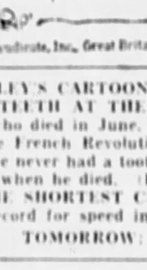
By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Longfellow's philosophy was broad enough to include the great American game which flowed into our national life along with his poetry. Perhaps I shall be pardoned for the attempt to paraphrase one of the Yankee Bard's short classics to make it apply to one of the vital high spots of the annual World Series games; for, after all, the struggle for baseball supremacy is a realistic yet fanciful spectacle that brings into heroic relief a Phillippe or a Babe Adams, a Matty or a Home Run Baker, a Rohe or a Gowdy, an Alexander or a Johnson, a Rawlings or a Wamby, a Collins or a Frisch, an Oldham or an Ehmke.

Who knows but at the deep-set spirits of the Cardinals and Athletics' dugouts are a couple of boys entirely oblivious of the crowns, the fortunes, of the game have in immediate store for them.



Babe Adams

More than a score of years ago the Pirates and Tigers rushed onto Forbes Field all ashow for a historic fight. Ty Cobb and Honus Wagner were the cynosure of all eyes in the packed stands. Seated in the corner of the Pittsburgh dugout was a handsome boy who was hardly more than a substitute. Throughout the season he was a fifth consideration, but his chieftain, Fred Clarke, had big things in view for the lad.

ADAMS "STEALS SHOW"

Babe Adams afterward said he had no idea of starting a game. He was tickled to be there and would have been thrilled had he been used in a relief role.

About 30 minutes before the great fight began, Clarke approached the nonchalant boy and remarked:

"Be ready, Babe—you're workin' today."

You know the rest, and you know about George Rohe, the White Sox recruit of 1906 who stole the show in Chicago. The Cubs were considered unbeatable and the poor Hitless Wonders were the object of pity, but with Rohe leading the way they won the title.

Our own Deacon Phillippe was the first great hero of the World Series play. The brilliant pitcher

SERIES HURLERS COMPARED

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—A comparison of the probable pitchers for the opening game of the World Series tomorrow:

Robert Moses Grove, ace of the Athletics' staff, 31 years old, 6 feet 2½ inches tall, weight 175 pounds, born in Lonaconing, Md. Grove participated in 41 games this season, won 31 and lost 4. He possesses blinding speed, with a sharp breaking curve, plus seven years of experience with the Athletics, including two World Series.

Paul Derringer, playing his first year with the Cardinals, 25 years old, born in Springfield, Ky. Derringer was in 35 games this season, won 18 and lost 8. He is a righthander, with a long sweeping delivery, good change of pace, with an excellent curve and good speed. He is a rangy youngster, 6 feet 3½ inches tall and weighing 215 pounds.

KDKA to Broadcast World Series Games

Baseball fans of Radio Station KDKA will hear a play-by-play account of the game between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Philadelphia Athletics when the two teams meet in St. Louis tomorrow afternoon. KDKA will start its baseball broadcast at 2 o'clock with Graham McNamee, veteran announcer, at the microphone.

A preliminary broadcast telling of the events going on just previous to the game will be broadcast. In each of the following games of the series KDKA will also broadcast preliminary activities of the games.

DERRINGER, GROVE MAY HURL OPENER

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Facing the possibility of a crippled lineup, the Cardinals breezed through their final batting and fielding drill today preparatory to opening World Series warfare tomorrow against their 1930 conquerors, the Champion Athletics.

That was the situation as the Athletics sped westward from Philadelphia to defend their title and Gabby Street, manager of the Cardinals, champions of the National League, was giving consideration to a last minute change in his lineup with a view of the replacing Earl (Sparky) Adams at third base. Adams, one of the sparkling cogs of the Cardinal machine, injured his left ankle 10 days ago. It still is swollen, painful and bandaged, with the result that Street may decide to keep him out of the first two conflicts.

If Adams is unable to start in the opening game tomorrow, Manager Street intends to inject Andy High into the third base position, with the batting order remaining the same.

HIGH FOR ADAMS

Coming on top of the shoulder injury that threw Jess Haines, one of the Cardinals' pitching aces, out of the series, the injury to Adams was a crushing blow to the hopes of the Cardinals, although High is regarded as a capable substitute. He is one of the few of the Cardinals who batted consistently in the 1928 World Series, lost to the Yankees, and has proved his ability in emergency roles in the past.

In addition to the loss of Pitcher Haines and the possibility that Adams may be forced to the bench, the Cardinals suffered a

MACK SEEKS GOOD START

By CONNIE MACK

They left the North Philadelphia Station at 8 o'clock last night amid a roaring farewell from a crowd of several thousand that packed the platform.

Connie Mack

They are scheduled to reach their destination in St. Louis late this afternoon. Then one night's rest at their hotel and they will be battling with the Cardinals tomorrow afternoon.

It is a well known fact that the Cardinals are a wonderful team in their own park. While they also are a good road club, the Cardinals themselves will admit that they are much better when playing before the home crowd.

I never will forget those three games we played in St. Louis last fall. Hallahan beat Walberg, 8 to 0, and the next day Haines turned around and downed Lefty Grove, 3 to 1, to deadlock the series.

RECALLS LAST SERIES

Then the third game in St. Louis resulted in one of the greatest pitching duels in history. Not until Jimmy Foxx came up in the ninth inning with Cochrane on base and cannonaded a home run into the left center bleachers were we able to win our first and only game in St. Louis.

Foxx's dramatic home run enabled Earnshaw to beat Grimes, 2 to 0. This game was the turning point of the series. It put us out in front again and we won the sixth game in Philadelphia to retain the world title.

I can truthfully say I will feel satisfied if the Athletics get an even break in the first two games.

Should the Cardinals win the first two games they will be a mighty hard club to defeat, for it will give them great confidence, and it also means that the series will go back to St. Louis even if we win two or three games in Philadelphia.

CARDS TO BE TOUGH

On the other hand, if the Athletics take these two games in St. Louis, then the series should end in Philadelphia without another trip to St. Louis being necessary.

The fact that American League teams have beaten their National League rivals in so many World Series of late years does not mislead me.

The Cardinals are the products of a remarkable baseball organization whose arms reach throughout the nation to feed this team with exceptionally good players.

The Missourians have been good enough to win two pennants in a row and had a much easier time of it this year than they did in 1930. They'll be tough to beat.

ROONEYS, BURNS TO CLASH IN NIGHT GAME

RIO CIRCUIT CHAMPS BEGIN TITLE DEFENSE

TONIGHT'S GAME
James P. Rooneys at Dan Burns
SUNDAY GAMES
McKeesport (champion at Rooneys Bridgeville)
West View at East Liverpool.
Dan Burns at East Pittsburgh.

By TOM BIRKS

With the independent conference champions, the Rooneys, managed again by Art Rooney, scheduled to start to defend their title this evening at the Parnassus High School field, a great crowd is expected to wend its way up the Allegheny River to watch the 1931 edition of the Burns and Rooney clubs swing into action.

Last sea on the Rooneys, then known as the Majestics, opened against Burns and it was the only game the club lost throughout a tough season. Chile, little Burns end, snapped a pass out of the air to score the only touchdown.

A number of new faces will grace both lineups. Many stars who flashed across the college gridiron last season will be in the game.

BERKMAN VS. ROONEY

The rival quarterbacks will be Stan Berkman for Burns, and Jimmy Rooney for the visitors. Gillas, former Georgetown star, will be in the backfield for Burns with Ford and Zoltac, while Art Rooney probably will start with an all-Pitt backfield.

Jimmy Rooney will play quarter, calling the signals. Bucky Wagner and Whitey Walinchus will be at the halves and Franklin Hood is to be at fullback.

Ted Rosencsweig, former Carnegie Tech star, will play end, and is expected to smear plays around his end.

Honey Guarino will start for Rooney, and it will be a great battle when Guarino and Rosencsweig clash.

PUNTING DUEL

A punting duel between Stan Berkman and Jimmy Rooney also touted highly when it comes to throwing passes, will be watched.

The game will be called at 8:15 and the new conference rule fines both clubs if a game starts late. The officials of the Dan Burns Club are looking for one of the greatest crowds that ever watched a sandlot game.

The sponsors of the lightweight football conference here announced that the Rox Rangers will finish out their schedule in Section 1 of the circuit.

Some difference occurred regarding the interpretation of the rules and the club stated it was through with league football. However, a conference between Coach Uansa and league officials straightened everything out.

DUKES AWAIT OGLETHORPE

They are not husky, but both are hard fighters, and, with Jim Baushke, usually carried as a tackle, they will represent the sole replacements for Kebe and Sample.

Colin Stewart, held in Pittsburgh last Saturday because of last-minute scholastic trouble that did not cause his ineligibility, however, reported for practice last night, and was used as an alternate with Ostrosky at left end.

PITT GOES WEST

The Pitt Panthers will pull out tonight 33 strong and head for Iowa City, Iowa, by way of Chicago and Davenport. Saturday they meet the University of Iowa at Iowa City.

Jock Sutherland plans no lineup changes for his team, the same combination which faced Miami last Saturday being due to start against the Hawkeyes.

This will be Hirshbers and Collins, ends; MacMurdo and Quatse, tackles; Milligan and Morris, guards; Daugherty, center; Hogan, quarterback; Heller and Reider, halfbacks, and Clark, fullback.

Hogan again will be entrusted with the kicking duties and Paul Reider will get another chance at kicking points after touchdown, providing the Panthers are able to score.

The team will work out in Chicago on Thursday and in Davenport, Ia., on Friday, staying in Davenport until shortly before game time when they leave for Iowa City.

The Pitt party will be composed of 33 players, Jimmy Hagan, assistant director of athletics; I. P. Seig, faculty representative; Jock Sutherland and Andy Gustafson, coaches; Dr. Ralph Shanor, team physician; George Moore, trainer; Percy St. Claire Browne, custodian of equipment; Bernard Windt and Elmer Rosenbloom, managers.

The players who are making the trip:

In addition to the two Pennsylvania Railroad sleeping cars already set up for carrying the team, an additional sleeper has been assigned to carry fans on train 25.

STREET 49 TODAY

ROY (ACE) CLARK

HEAVIES BOX TONIGHT

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

Weather permitting, the last fling of the outdoor boxing season in the Pittsburgh district will be flung at the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, tonight. It really is a post-season affair, the Bowl having started a finale more than a week ago.

George Panka, Homestead heavyweight, meets Roy (Ace) Clark, giant Negro, of Philadelphia, in the 10-round main bout. It is Panka's first fight around here since last spring at Motor Square Garden, and marks the initial appearance here of Clark, who has boxed Primo Carnera, Arthur DeKuh, Jack Gross and other well-known heavies.

Eddie Reed, classy Negro lightweight, of Philadelphia, and formerly of Erie, boxes Mickey Duris, of Johnstown, in the eight-round semi-final. Chuck Taggart, of Butler, and Frank Novak, of the North Side heavies, box the second bout, and Silver Martini, of McKeesport, and Mickey Nigro, of Lisbon, O., are in the opener, at 8:30 o'clock.

Between Rounds

Ace Clark has a bout in the making with Mat Baer in California next month, according to Promoter Alphie Meyers. Eddie Reed, who appears with him on the Bowl card, is to box Ray Miller in Detroit, October 12.

Matt Mario, of New York, who beated Jimmy Belmont at Motor Square Garden, again holds his place in return here in about a week under the management of Pete Ahern, and wants to box Belmont again. Matty has met Baby Joe Gans, Young Terry, Andy DeVodi, Beryl Sammy Baker, Jackie Fields, Young Corbett and other leading welterweights.

Jack Barry, Erie promoter, has a further hearing scheduled before the Boxing Commission in Philadelphia next Wednesday, and likely will wind up by giving up his club to put all of his attention to handling Frankie Bogarski.

Of the approximately $4,700 gate for the Tony Herrera-Joey Goodman show at Motor Square Garden Monday night more than $2,000 was in $1 tickets, which is the significant fact that the fans are spending carefully these days.

Tiger Joe West is confined to bed with tonsilitis and probably will not be able to box again for another three or four weeks. He was running a temperature when he boxed Paul Pirrone at the Bowl recently and received a draw.

Joe Dubrosky, of McKeesport, has added Nick Causo, steubenville lightweight, and Gene Campbell, Wheeling middleweight, to his string of boxers.

The first wrestling show in Western Pennsylvania since the blowup of the local attempt to put over the sport this summer is scheduled at Bradford tonight with Jim Geroge and Leo Macajues, of the Boston group, appearing in the two main bouts. A home-town promoter will stage the show, which has been sanctioned by Dr. W. D. Mortland, state Commissioner.

LITTLE WORLD SERIES OPENS TODAY

ST. PAUL, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Manager Lefty Leifield, of St. Paul, and Manager Billy Southworth, of Rochester, both predicted the first victory for their teams in baseball's Little World Series.

The champions of the American Association and the title winners of the International League will decide who was wrong when they say the first tilt today at Lexington Park.

Huck Betts will hurl for the Saints in an effort to win the first contest of the nine-game series. Southworth said he hadn't made up his mind who would be on the mound for the Red Wings, though Ray Starr, the most consistent winner for Rochester, was expected to get the call.

CHICAGO SERIES OPENS

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—The third-place National League Chicago Cubs were favored to take the measure of the last-place American League Chicago White Sox this afternoon when the two teams begin their annual city series at Wrigley Field. Charley Root was Manager Roger Hornsby's selection to start the mound offensive for the Cubs, while Red Faber was named by Manager Donie Bush as the White Sox's first pitcher.

SERIES ON AIR

Station WJAS tomorrow afternoon will start a detailed description of the opening of the world series between the Cardinals and Athletics at St. Louis. TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Nine players from the United States, two from England and five from Canada moved into the second round of the Canadian women's golf championship yesterday.

The outstanding favorites, including the defending champion, Maureen Orcutt, of Englewood, N. J., disposed of their first round opponents with ease. Advancing to the second round along with Miss Orcutt were such formidable contenders as Mrs. O. S. Hill, of Kansas City; Marion Hollins, of Santa Cruz, Cal., former American champion; Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago; Ada Mackenzie, of Toronto; Mrs. W. G. Fraser, the former Alexa Stirling, of Ottawa, and Enid Wilson and Marjorie Kerr, of England.

Miss Orcutt, the medalist, overwhelmed Mrs. L. G. Riley, of Pittsburgh, 7 and 6, the same count by which Mrs. Hill put out Mrs. Cecil Cowan, of Toronto. Mrs. Hill provided the outstanding golf of the day. She was out in 36, two under women's par, to turn 5 up and then won two of the first three holes of the incoming journey to terminate the match on the twelfth green.

Miss Hollins had no trouble with Mrs. Ronald Holmes, of Toronto, whom she defeated 7 and 6. Miss Van Wie eliminated Rosamond Sherwood, of Stockbridge, Mass., 3 and 2.

The British entrants scored easily. Miss Wilson, British champion, conquering Martha Brewer, of Weston, Mass., 6 and 5, and Miss Kerr putting out Mrs. R. W. Goumlock, Toronto, 5 and 4.

Miss Mackenzie defeated Mrs. H. D. Sterrett, of Hutchison, Kan., 5 and 4. Mrs. Fraser, however, had to go to the eighteenth green to eliminate Doris Taylor, of Quebec, 1 up.

Mrs. S. G. Bennett, of Toronto, eliminated Fritzi Stifel, of Wheeling, W. Va., 1 up.

MACKMEN EN ROUTE TO ST. LOUIS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—The Champion American League baseball team left for St. Louis last night in quest of its third consecutive World Series pennant with the cheers and good wishes of frenzied fans echoing after its special train.

Photographers' flashlights flared, the crowd roared its acclamation and farewell and some of the fans pressed so closely against the train that the departure was delayed five minutes while a group of redcaps pushed them back.

Each athlete received an ovation as he appeared at the North Philadelphia Station, but the greatest roar was reserved for Connie Mack, the smiling mentor of the A's.

Mack was reluctant to make any predictions as to the outcome of the series of games his boys will play with the St. Louis Cardinals, champions of the National League for the second straight season.

TRAIN PASSES THROUGH

The Philadelphia Athletics' special train, en route to St. Louis, for the World Series opener with the Cards tomorrow, passed through Pittsburgh at 4 o'clock this morning. The train, which included a number of fans as well as the players, was made up of seven sleepers, a diner and an observation car.

THE FORD is good-looking. It is safe. Comfortable. Speedy. Reliable. Long-lived. Economical. Everything a good car should be.

There is, too, an added something about it that brings enthusiastic comments from every one who has ever driven a Ford . . . the joy it puts in motoring.

"I have been a car owner continuously for nearly 20 years," writes a motorist connected with a leading university. "During this period I have bought eleven new automobiles. Eight of the eleven were in the middle-price field, one cost three thousand dollars, and the last is a Ford coupe that I purchased thirteen months ago.

"In the light of this experience I can say in all sincerity that I have derived more genuine satisfaction from the Ford than any car I ever owned. In saying this, I am thinking in terms of comfort, safety, driving pleasure, ease of control and economy. My next car will also be a Ford because it will give me what I want at a price I can afford to pay."

When you get behind the wheel of the Ford and drive it yourself you will know it is a truly remarkable car at a low price. You will like it when you first buy it. You will become more and more enthusiastic the longer you drive it.

The Ford is made to stand up. Time reveals what you cannot see at a glance . . . the sincere quality built into every part. After thousands of miles of driving you will still say "it's a great car." You will be able to look back and figure that you have saved a great many dollars in operation cost, repairs and depreciation by buying a Ford.

VETS JUSTIFY ST. VINCENT'S CONFIDENCE

BEARCATS HAVE STRONG TEAM, FINE MORALE

This is the seventeenth of an annual series of special articles written by Jess Carver, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph football writer, dealing with the prospects of tri-state district college elevens. The concluding article of the series on Kiski will appear in tomorrow's issue.

By JESS CARVER
Sun-Telegraph Correspondent

LATROBE, Pa., Sept. 30.—By the time one traipses about this tri-state territory for three or four weeks visiting some 17 or 18 college football camps, it becomes very difficult to become enthused over the prospects of any particular squad. After all, it is tough to get a good line on a team by just watching it in training and listening to the wails of the coaches. And generally they all wail.

Here at St. Vincent, however, there is no wailing, and there is a maximum of confidence. The Saints have exhibited symptoms of possessing a real eleven, judging from the way in which the powerful Davis-Elkins eleven was battled in the opening game and the comparative ease with which Westinghouse Technical School was turned back last Saturday.

Coach Clem Crowe and his assistant, Jeff Zappone, are working with a squad of 31 players 14 of whom are lettermen. The spirit is fine and the squad prospects very good.

VETERANS AT ENDS

By this time, with two games gone by the boards, Coach Crowe has settled on a starting line-up. On his line he has Henry Best and Will Carnes, both veterans at the wings. Best has been coming along a bit slow so far, but is being counted upon for yeoman service.

At the tackles, Larry Dunlap and Creed Westphal, also lettermen, are holding fourth. Westphal is playing his last year for the Bearcats. Dunlap may be out of the game this week with Mt. St. Mary's due to a split finger, but his absence from the lineup will not extend over a week.

Mike Duda, a hard-charging lineman and Jack Pearl, the most promising of the freshmen, are in there at the guards. Duda is a letterman. Pearl is light, but fast and a cracker-jack at getting into the interference.

Emmett (Pinkey) Brown, one of the best defensive men on the entire squad and a ranking defense player of the district, is over the ball at center. He passes straight and true, and does so consistently.

EVANCHO AT FULL

The back field quartet is led by Capt. Andy Evancho, stationed at fullback and on the job backing up the line on the defense. Francis Kirchner, another veteran, runs the team from quarterback and runs it well. He also handles most of the passing. The kicking job is taken by Steve Furin, at halfback, who is paired off with Art Fualto. All four are lettermen.

On the reserve eleven, Crowe has a pair of freshmen at the ends in Hirt and Collins. The tackle jobs are held by Jack Connors, a letterman, and Freddy Kline, an ambitious freshman. Joe Hurray, who won his letter a year ago, and Jim O'Brien, a freshman, are being used for reserve guard strength. Tom Frederick replaces Pinkey Brown at center when he's needed.

Jack Dashney, a freshman hailing from Oswego, N. Y., is the most likely appearing backfield candidate and will find himself in the first backfield more often than not. He'll sub for Furin. Mike Robinski, Harold Paul and Mike Berta are other halfbacks. Augie Brown and Bill Boadner are sub quarterbacks, Boadner being a letterman. Johnny Korfonta is Capt. Evancho's understudy at fullback.

ST. MARY'S NEXT

The game this week, the Saints in Emmetsburg, is for a game with Mt. St. Mary's. St. Bonaventure will be played next week at Olean, N. Y., and the week following, the Bearcats go to Buffalo for the annual tussle with Canisius.

Salem appears at Latrobe October 24, the Cats go to Greenville to play Thiel October 31, and on November 11, St. Francis is met at Latrobe in the annual Armistice Day tussle won last fall by St. Vincent.

New River State will end the Bearcats in winding up their season here on November 21.

Edith Cross Wins Over Helen Jacobs

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—By virtue of her unexpected victory of Helen Jacobs, Miss Edith Cross of San Francisco, loomed today as the favorite to win the women's championship of the Pacific Coast in the tournament now under way here.

Miss Jacobs appeared to have the match well in hand after taking the first set, 6-3. Miss Cross, however, came back with such a fiery attack that she won the next two sets, 8-6, 6-3.

In the second feature match of the day Lester Stoeffen and Sidney Wood had to battle to eliminate Ray Casey and Laurison Driscoll in the men's doubles. The score was 7-5, 8-7, 9-7.

HAWTHORNE MUTUELS

The Coach's Viewpoint

By Howard Harpster

Geneva College Football Coach Former All-America Quarterback at Carnegie Tech

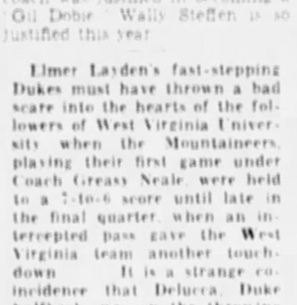
The 1931 football season got under way in earnest last Saturday when most of the country's major teams swung into action for the first time. Locally, the results were about as expected, although I haven't heard anybody say he won money on Washington's surprise victory over Penn State. As a result of their fine start, the Yellow Jackets certainly will bear watching the remainder of the season.

Pitt, playing the highly-touted Miami University team, scored a touchdown on an average of every six minutes, which would seem to indicate that the depression isn't having any harmful effect on the way the Panther offense is moving. Reider and Heller, the Pitt halfbacks, looked very impressive as they ran at will through the Miami team, and are the type of runners that may break away for long runs against any team.

The fact that the Miami backfield, which included an all-Ohio star, was able to advance the ball by scrimmage a total net distance of only 27 yards, indicates that Pitt will have another strong line. Some one suggests that perhaps Miami could have gained a few more yards if Pitt hadn't kept the ball all afternoon.

Carnegie Tech opened the season rather unimpressively at Buffalo, scoring only three earned touchdowns. When you stop to consider the mediocre material with which the Tech coaches have to work, the fact that two of the regulars were declared ineligible for the season just before the first game, and the exceptionally hard schedule which the team must play, it is little wonder that there isn't much optimism present in the Carnegie camp. If ever a coach was justified in becoming a Gil Dobie, Wally Steffen is so justified this year.

Elmer Layden's fast-stepping Dukes must have thrown a bad scare into the hearts of the followers of West Virginia University when the Mountaineers, playing their first game under Coach Greasy Neale, were held to a 7-to-6 score until late in the final quarter, when an intercepted pass gave the West Virginia team another touchdown. It is a strange coincidence that Delucca, Duke halfback, was on the throwing end of the intercepted pass at Morgantown which cost Layden's men the second score, while the week before it was he who intercepted a pass and scored the deciding touchdown against Geneva.



W. & J., which meets Tech in the Stadium Saturday, looked like a very powerful team when it defeated a hard-fighting West Virginia Wesleyan eleven at Washington. The offense was quite ragged in spots, but the power is there, and once the plays are running smoothly, the team should be hard to stop. Gyp Battles pulled a strong man act for the Wesleyan team when he ran off tackle for 15 yards and then carried four W. & J. tacklers for another seven or eight yards.

The fifth W. & J. man to climb aboard was a little too much and rendered outrageous slab service in the first series in history—the Clash of the Pirates and Red Sox.

There was no series the following year through some kind of a mixup among the powers of the game, but in 1905 they started again and the string is still unbroken. And each titular event has produced at least one outstanding star.

FAME FOR GOWDY

The glamour that lighted up the personality of Hank Gowdy in 1914 will always remain as a halo around a person who was an obscure player up to that year. Hank won his fame as the Braves topped the proud Athletics four games in a row to win the title. It is impossible to state what player of history has won the greatest fame in World Series play, but Hank surely is near the top.

The surprise element lends much to the drama. This emotion was quickened by Connie Mack in Chicago in the first game of the 1929 series when Connie sent Howard Ehmke to the mound. The tall pitcher, almost at the end of his career, was not even considered by most of the experts.

Who will be the unsung player to rise to fame in the next 10 days?

Boucher Refuses Terms of Rangers

OTTAWA, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Frank Boucher, famous center ice of the New York Rangers, of the National Hockey League, has refused to accept a new contract offered him by the Ranger management, and will remain out of hockey unless his terms are met, he says.

Boucher said the contract offered him by the Rangers carried a 25 per cent salary cut over the amount he received under the three-year agreement terminated last spring.

GLENNA IS MEDALIST

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, former national woman's golf champion, carded an 80 to equal the tournament record and win the qualifying round of the Berwyn Cup golf tournament over the Lower Merion course here today. Mrs. Vare's 80 is the record of the Huntingdon Valley Club on which the tourney is being played, was set in 1929 by Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd.

DUDLEY PLAYS HACKNEY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Ed Dudley, of Chalfont, Pa., and Clarence Hackney, of Atlantic City, won their way to the final of the Philadelphia professional championship golf tournament yesterday at the Fawn Hollow Club. They will meet in a 36-hole match today.

DES MOINES WINS FLAG

DES MOINES, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Des Moines today held the Western League baseball championship for 1931, having defeated the Wichita Aviators in four out of five games in the playoff series here. The Demons clinched the title with a 6-to-5 victory over the Aviators last night.

ALBIE BOOTH STARS

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 30.—(INS.)—Albie Booth, the great Yale triple threat halfback, is in practice games. He raced the varsity yesterday, when he ran 40 and 50 yards for two touchdowns to give Yale a good showing over the substitutes. It was Yale's first secret session.

MACK SEES MYSTERY MAN

By NICK ALTROCK.
Baseball's Funny Man.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—With the World Series so near the beer can hardly hold out, us experts and poker players are trying to figure what old Connie Mack has poked up his sleeve. We can't forget 1929 in Chicago when everyone was counting on Grove for the opener and then Connie shoved in Howard Ehmke, who'd been laying off all season. When he went into the box the experts didn't recognize Ehmke. They couldn't even spell him.

Nick Altrock

So we are busy pondering and boy you ought to see me when I ponder—what kind of a tomato surprise the old chef will dish up this year. We've been going over all the persons that have been missing a year, like Judge Crater, a flock of bank presidents, important witnesses, etc., and trying to pick out the one that Connie will start. My own guess is that he will start Charley Ross, who has been missing for 30 years.

If Connie Mack is going to make this World Series another mystery show, the Cards only chance is to sign up Thurston, the magician, and give Gabby Street the series off.

GROVE A NIGHTMARE

At that I don't know why the old boy can't lay down his wand and just start Lefty Grove. Of course the experts will holler that that is just what the Cards are expecting, but won't that do the Cards a lot of good?

If the Cards have any advantage in expecting Lefty Grove and then getting him, they're welcome to it. Or if Connie did cross them and started Earnshaw, the result probably would be the same. That's just the same as a guy waiting to go to the electric chair and then the warden comes in and says that they ain't going to electrocute him,—they're going to hang him instead. If that's what you call relief, I've been paying dues to the wrong Red Cross.

Gabby Street also has us chewing our pencils over whom he will start. Some experts favor Grimes and some Hallahan, but there also are a lot of unpledged Nick Altrock Advance World Series Story No. 5 delegates among the scribes. A handful of small-town sagebrush writers even have mentioned Calvin Coolidge. They may be as close as the rest of us at that.

THE PITCHING ANGLE

The old school experts claim Burleigh Grimes with his World Series experience and his spitter, would be the smartest choice. But last year the A's showed Burleigh they are all non-union cigar smokers and ain't afraid of spit.

I've been attending world series so long now I have corns on my typewriting fingers. Every year the scribes get heated up 10 days in advance over who'll be the starting pitchers. Personally, I think it is more important to know if they'll finish.

That's one thing I never bite my fingernails over. What a sucker I'd be to be worrying these past 10 days over whom Gabby and Connie will pick to pitch when they probably don't even know themselves right now.

NICK REMAINS CALM

Whenever Uncle Nick checks into a town to cover a world series, there's one thing he worries about. That's to get a baseball writer's badge and find out where they're serving the free grub. Once I'm all set on that, I don't care who pitches the opening day.

So pardon me if I don't get all stirred up in this dispatch. When Uncle Nick wants to sweat, he goes to a Turkish bath.

Benny Must Begin At Bottom Again, Comish Orders

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—The New York State Athletic Commission has refused to sanction a bout in Madison Square Garden, October 16, between Benny Leonard and Paulie Walker, slugging young middleweight from Trenton, N. J. The commission told the retired undefeated lightweight champion he must prove his ability in the smaller clubs before appearing in the Garden.

William Muldoon, veteran member of the commission, maintained that Leonard's seven-year absence from the ring meant that he must begin at the bottom of the ladder again, and Chairman James A. Farley agreed.

Chick. I understand that Haas will start in center for the A's. He is a marvelous fly-chaser, and I can't conceive of anybody being any better ground coverer, although they tell me Martin is very fast. But it strikes me that Simmons, Haas and Miller shape up better than Hafey, Martin and either Roettger or Watkins. Street uses Roettger against left-hand pitchers and Watkins against right-handers.

Behind the bat, the A's have the edge, but that is no reflection on Jimmy Wilson, one of the great receivers of recent years. It just happens that he is brought into a comparison with the greatest all-around performer this position has shown in at least 20 years. Many critics rate Mickey Cochrane as the best catcher, judged by all-around ability, in the history of the game.

PITCHING STATUS

In pitching, the quantity rests with the Cardinals and the top quality is with the A's. That statement is easy to understand because Lefty Grove is with the Mackmen, and George Earnshaw also will do considerable pitching.

Summing up, the Cards have the edge in the infield, and the A's in the outfield. Each team has a great catcher, with the advantage on the side of the A's. Street has more good pitchers, but is not so well equipped with stars for a short series.

MACKS, CARDS ON EDGE

third major casualty in the injury of John (Pepper) Martin, nursing a damaged knee. Martin, however, undoubtedly will get into the game despite his injury, but Manager Street has several other combinations available if Martin is unable for duty in centerfield.

In the event Martin's damaged knee keeps him out of the game, Manager Street says he will place George Watkins in center field and Ernie Orsatti in right against right-handed pitching and Wally Roettger in center and Ray Blades in right against left-handed pitching.

With the Athletics ruling as 7-to-5 favorites, the Cardinals nevertheless, are determined to triumph in spite of the line pursuing them. Manager Street says his club is well equipped in reserves, and with capable players available to fill any gap that accident may create, the Cardinals will take the field with confidence against their American League rivals. Street declares that several times during the season, while the Cardinals were fighting for the championship, he was several times forced to call on reserves because of injuries or illness to regulars, and that the reserves came through with colors flying.

DERRINGER VS. GROVE

There is a dramatic possibility that Paul Derringer, 25-year-old pitching rookie, playing his first year with the Cardinals, may pitch his teammates to victory in the initial combat tomorrow, as it is considered reasonably certain today that he will be selected to oppose Robert Moses Grove, pitching ace of the Athletics, and greatest hurler of modern time. Derringer, possessing rare courage and pitching ability, is eager for the assignment and Manager Street intends to give it to him, saving Wild Bill Hallahan to face the Athletics Friday.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, has definitely decided to start Debrill Williams at shortstop in place of Joe Boley, thus making his first switch in the championship team that clubbed its way to victory over the Cardinals a year ago, and the Cubs in 1929. The Athletics will arrive in St. Louis too late to engage in practice, but they are familiar with Sportsmans' Park, having played 11 games in the baseball plant during the American League season.

RECORD CROWD PREDICTED

With moderate weather around 75 degrees forecast, indications were today that a record-breaking crowd in excess of the 39,960 that attended the World Series games with the Yankees here in 1926 will witness tomorrow's contest. Every seat has been sold and 5,000 bleacher seats, together with 3,500 unreserved pavilion seats, and 3,500 standing room, will be thrown open to the public tomorrow noon.

As dawn broke over Sportsmans' Park today, 11 hopefuls were already in line to purchase unreserved seats. Horace Auspaugh, of Sedalia, Mo., a 31-year-old unemployed hotel clerk, was the first before the gates. He landed there at 7 a. m. last Monday to win a $200 bet that he would purchase ticket No. 1. If he sticks until the gates are opened tomorrow, he will have been in line 78½ hours. Auspaugh, protected by a raincoat and a blanket, spends most of his time sitting in a canvas chair. Dan Corcoran, Portland, Ore., joined him at 5 o'clock yesterday.

GRID GAMES CANCELED

LEWISBURG, Pa., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—The Bucknell freshman football game with East Stroudsburg Teachers' College, scheduled for here Saturday, was canceled yesterday because three members of the Bucknell team are under quarantine for infantile paralysis. None is serious, Dr. L. P. Fowle, university physician, said. A game with Cook Academy, scheduled for October 3, likely will be canceled, but the team will complete the remainder of its schedule.

CALUMET BASTLE WINS

LEXINGTON, Ky., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—The 2:18 trot, won by Calumet Bastle, proved best of an abbreviated program of three races at the Grand Circuit track here yesterday. It was closing day of the meeting and of the 1931 Grand Circuit. It required four heats for the Michigan-owned 3-year-old to win, but his victory in the final heat was an easy one.

TOLEDO IN BANKRUPTCY

TOLEDO, O., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—A receiver was appointed for the Toledo Baseball Club of the American Association yesterday. Bondholders who requested the appointment said the club was $115,131 in arrears, including a $50,000 rent bill, on which the club's franchise is posted as security.

Fight Results

At Yonkers, N. Y.—Victorio Campolo knocked out Charley Weinert, 1 round; Matty Sampson defeated Donald Moore, 10 rounds; Frank Unger defeated Georgie Kelly, 8 rounds.
At Kansas City, Mo.—Cohen defeated Herman Fields, 12 rounds; Freddie Hamilton defeated Henry Perrick, 8 rounds; Frankie Brown defeated Frank Randolph, 10 rounds.

SCHOOL RIVALS TO TANGLE

By JULIUS LEVIN

The list of undefeated teams in the race for the Syracuse Cup, emblematic of the championship of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic League, will be narrowed down considerably this week-end, judging from the number of contests that involve contenders for the title. Three teams, all boasting two victories and no defeats so far this season, will have a chance to record their third successive triumphs Friday. The headliner of the week is the battle scheduled that night between Charleroi and New Castle at New Castle. In the afternoon Vandergrift goes to Tarentum bent on registering its third straight victory.

E. E. Loucks

OLD RIVALS CLASH

Two old rivals, Greensburg and Youngwood, likewise undefeated in two games, are slated to tangle at Greensburg Saturday afternoon. Coach Earl Loucks rears his Brown and White gridders for tackling their hardest test of the season in Coach Buzz Wesbecher's boys and is preparing his squad accordingly. Both Loucks and Wesbecher played at Wash-Jeff.

Wilkinsburg will be given a chance to record its third straight victory by opposing East Huntingdon Township at Wilkinsburg. East Huntingdon has lost one and tied one in two games so far this season.

Ford City makes its first start of the season by opposing Turtle Creek Union at Turtle Creek. The valley eleven will be out to make it three straight, having defeated Pitcairn and Trafford in its first two games.

Monessen will make its bid for three in a row at the expense of Canonsburg. The latter team lost the only game it has played to date.

TUBERS AT UNIONTOWN

Coach Everhart's Uniontown eleven, already victorious in two games, meets McKeesport at Uniontown. Ambridge, Carmichaels, Connellsville, Fayette City, Freeport, Jeannette, Midland, Mt. Lebanon and Swissvale also get a chance to increase their winning streaks this week-end.

Two contests have been moved up one day. The Mt. Lebanon-Braddock game at Mt. Lebanon will be played on Friday instead of Saturday, while the Scott-Crafton clash at North Braddock will be played tomorrow night instead of Friday.

FANS TO USE BUSES

CHARLEROI, Pa., Sept. 30.—A special train and a fleet of special buses will carry more than 3,000 fans to the Charleroi-New Castle High football game Friday night, it was reported by the Charleroi Athletic Association today. Arrangements for the specials were made yesterday.

Legion Pitcher May Join Buccos

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Kirby Higbe, 16-year-old righthanded pitcher on the Columbia American Legion junior baseball team, the Eastern champions, today said he has been proffered a contract by the Pittsburgh Pirates and would sign it.

FOURSOME PLAY AT CHARTIERS HEIGHTS

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

With the official major golf championship season ended, only a few club championships and minor tourneys remain on the Western Pennsylvania links horizon.

Today a field of almost 200 was scheduled to participate in a mixed foursome tourney at the Chartiers Heights Country Club. A dinner dance will wind up affairs this evening.

Paul E. (Toots) Erath, of Edgewood, won his second caddiemasters and assistant professionals' championship in a row at Longue Vue yesterday, when he defeated Edmund Onoretta, Schenley Park assistant pro, 6 and 4, in the 18-hole final. In semi-final battles Erath had disposed of Bill Stocker, of Stanton Heights, 7 and 5, and Onoretta scored a 75 to eliminate Joe Connor, of Chartiers Heights, 2 and 1. The cards of the finalists:

Erath, out	4	4	4	5	3	4	5	5	37
Onoretta, out	5	4	5	4	3	5	5	5	41
Erath, in	5	3	4	5	4				36
Onoretta, in	4	5	4	5	4				38

BOYD, PARTNER WIN

F. C. Boyd and Mrs. L. D. Neuman won the mixed foursome tourney yesterday at the Edgewood Country Club, returning a card of 87-10—77, which was low net as well as low gross. A large field competed.

Katherine MacCloskey has won the Longue Vue club championship. She defeated Mrs. J. A. Lowry, 2 up, in the final. The men's championship final will be played Sunday, with W. E. McKinley battling W. R. Furey. The defending champion, George D. Breck, Jr., was eliminated in the second round.

Three holes in one were reported yesterday. Perry DelVecchio, progreenkeeper at the Greensburg Country Club, has been trying for 20 years to get his first ace—and he was rewarded yesterday by dropping one on the 200-yard fiftieth hole on his home layout, using a No. 3 iron. His 1 gave him a tally of 67, four under par figures. He was playing with C. B. Hollingsworth. Fiore Bruno pro at Hill Crest, and C. W. Walley, of Hill Crest. His card:

Out	5	2	3	4	3	4	4	4	34
In	5	4	4	3	4	4	3	5	36—67

Dr. W. J. K. Snyder joined the mythical Hole-In-One Club, when he bagged an ace on the 169-yard second hole at Shannopin. He was playing with Dr. A. H. Elliott.

NEW LAYOUT TESTED

G. W. White, of 157 Wellington avenue, Washington, Pa., playing with Roy H. Bavington and Frank Borland, tallied a hole in one on the 147-yard fifteenth at the South County Park links. He used a brassie.

John J. Burke, city office manager of county parks, led the first foursome to play the full 18 holes at the North Park links around the new layout yesterday, and the second nine holes there, recently completed, were found to be a real test of golf.

Just to show that he was acquainted with the game, as well as the new layout, Burke scored 43-45—88.

A number of women who plan on playing in the Northwestern Pennsylvania tourney, at the Riverside Golf Club, Cambridge Springs, tomorrow and Friday, departed today for the scene of action.

Entries for the invitation medal play tourney at the Summit Golf Club, near Uniontown, Saturday and Sunday, were increasing, it was announced by Leo Heyn.

Irish Students Get Free Tickets to Game

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 30.—(INS.)—The Notre Dame rebellion was quieted yesterday when officials announced the university will stand the expense of student tickets for the charity game October 10 between Notre Dame and Northwestern, at Chicago.

Tickets will be given free to all students who present their athletic ticket books, Jesse C. Harper, director of athletics, stated. When it appeared that the regulation student coupons would not be good for entrance to the game, the students had begun circulating a petition in protest.

IRISH LOSE LUKATS

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—An X-ray examination yesterday revealed that Nick Lukats, star Notre Dame halfback, was suffering with a fractured ankle and may be out of the game for the rest of the season.

Aimee Wed With Own Service

(Accompanying is the third chapter of Aimee Semple McPherson's own story of her romance with David Hutton, the singer, whom she married in an airplane elopement.)

By AIMEE SEMPLE M'PHERSON
High Priestess of Angelus Temple, Los Angeles, Cal.

In our haste to reach Yuma for my marriage to David Hutton, Miss Jordan, who performed the ceremony, came away without her nuptial book for the wedding. On the flight she told me:

"I don't know what I'm going to do, sister. I don't think I can remember the wedding ceremony word for word. What are we going to do?"

I consoled her:

"Never mind. I'll write the ceremony for you."

A few close friends who had gone ahead to Yuma had got the marriage license clerk out of bed to issue the license for us. When the plane landed, they took us to the San Carlos Hotel. There we filled out the application.

WED IN PLANE

We went back to the airport and stepped into the plane to be married. Miss Jordan, the minister, began to read the ceremony I had written for her. They told me later I was pale and taut, but I did try hard to smile as I linked my arm with Dave's. Miss Jordan read:

"Dearly beloved, we have gathered here together in the presence of God and these witnesses to join this man and this woman in the bands of holy wedlock.

"Marriage is not to be entered into lightly, but with discretion and faith in the fear of God.

"David L. Hutton, do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife, to have and to hold from this day forward, for better or for worse, for richer or poorer, in sickness and in health, so long as you both shall live?"

And Dave answered firmly:

"I do."

Miss Jordan read the same question to me and I said the same thing as Dave:

"I do."

BOTH TAKE RINGS

Dave then handed me a platinum gold wedding ring, while he retained another for himself as we used the double ring ceremony.

We repeated after Miss Jordan:

"With this ring I thee wed in the name of the Father and of the Holy Ghost."

I was now "Mrs. David L. Hutton."

A moment later, after an embrace, our plane was again in the air, homeward-bound for Los Angeles. Dave said:

"It's all over now."

I remembered smiling as I replied:

"It has only begun, darling."

We had a wonderful flight back through the dawn.

However, I was a worried, though happy bride, for the thought of how my church people would take my marriage was a stunning problem. I had been theirs so long.

We arrived back at the Glendale Airport at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning, and I went directly to Angelus Temple to preach the morning sermon.

PREACHES ON "BRIDES"

A bride of only a few hours, I thought it would be very appropriate if I took for my sermon the topic, "Brides." And I preached to 5,000 people about brides but not a single one there among the worshipers knew at the time of my marriage.

Leaders of the temple were enthusiastic in their expressions of joy over the wedding, sudden as it was, and they also paid compliments to Dave, my husband.

While the elders unanimously approved my marriage, I faced the still greater situation of what my congregation would do.

He loves the same work as I do and I told them that the two of us would work better than I alone ever could.

THEFT SUSPECT HELD FOR TRIAL

Jack A. Williams, 23, of New York, arrested by Mt. Lebanon police during a chase after he is alleged to have been detected leaving an apartment house, was held for court on charges of entering a building and larceny when arraigned before Justice of the Peace E. B. Bishop, of Mt. Lebanon, last night.

The arrest occurred several days ago. Police say they took Williams into custody following a chase during which several shots were fired. They recovered a suitcase and wearing apparel which had been stolen from the apartment of Bess McFarland at 44 Academy avenue and from the home of F. L. Cottringer at 125 Baywood avenue.

Al Smith Should Be Next to Name His Successor

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Cal Coolidge proves you don't need a motorcycle escort to be smart.

By nominating Mr. Hoover for the 1932 lease, Cal makes Herbert look like a proxy.

Mr. Hoover's reaction to the Coolidge support was favorable. It gives him a flying start of one vote.

Vice President Curtis hasn't named his choice for second base. If it's Alice Roosevelt's brother you can bet that Dolly Gann will have a tough time getting in group photographs.

Cal may have drummed himself out of the political camp because of the prohibition angle. There's going to be an old-fashioned barroom fight over beer and even the victor will get sawdust in his hair.

The American Legion sang the stein song in Detroit. And though Mr. Hoover was walking out at the time he must admit that it was very close harmony.

WHARF PARKING HEARING SET

Parking garage owners who protested against the city's operation of the Monongahela and Allegheny riverfronts as parking sites will be given a public hearing by Council next Wednesday.

Three organizations, McCann & Co., the Pittsburgh Parking Garages and the Fourth Avenue Garage Company, wrote Council, contending that operation of the wharves for parking was "unethical, if not illegal," and brought a hardship on garage owners.

The complaints reached Council following announcement of a contemplated plan to improve and beautify the wharves to permit a larger parking area.

TWO MEN HURT, ONE KILLED BY AUTOS

McKeesport Patrolman Held After 'Cycle Collision; Dog Causes Truck Crash

Two men were injured last night when their motorcycle collided with an automobile driven by Patrolman John C. Rosepiler, of McKeesport, in Kennywood boulevard. Rosepiler was arrested by Mifflin Township police and released on bond.

A man believed to be John Steiner, 65, of 55 South Fifteenth street, died in Mercy Hospital yesterday, after he was struck by an automobile at Forbes street driven by Samuel H. Thompson.

Louis S. Totero, 19, of 105 Highland avenue, McKees Rocks, and Miss Suzanne Orr, 19, of 40 North Howard street, Bellevue, were arrested on reckless driving charges yesterday following their collision in California avenue when, police say, they sought to avoid running down a dog.

CULBERTSON'S BRIDGE CLAIM ASSAILED

French Discusses Systems As Players Gather Here For State Tournament

Claims of Ely Culbertson, national bridge authority, that a great majority of America's bridge players use his system are highly exaggerated, declared Capt. Fred G. French, president of the American Bridge League, as the Pennsylvania state championship bridge tournament gathered for its opening session in the William Penn Hotel today.

Culbertson was quoted as having said, Monday, that half of the $10,000,000 used annually to pay for the public's bridge lessons is wasted. This because 80 per cent of the people use his system.

French points to the national tournament at Asbury Park, N. J. He says Bridge Headquarters Inc., offered six trophies, provided the winners would make affidavits as to which system they use. French says:

"We expected to see Culbertson get his share of the affidavits. We knew that, if his claims are correct, about five of the six winners would indorse the Culbertson method. Not one of the champions used the Culbertson method.

M. E. Pastors Vote To Reduce Districts For Area to Four

By the REV. C. T. MURDOCK,
Special Correspondent.

INDIANA, Pa., Sept. 30.—The Pittsburgh conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session here today, voted to change the number of districts in the area from five to four. The motion was carried by a vote of 140 to 81 after a little battle.

Although the committee, appointed by Bishop Herbert Welch to consider the subject, had reported against the change, the conference body decided otherwise and legislation was introduced to change the number of districts.

After the usual communion rite, the memorial services for deceased ministers was held.

In addition to this number there was the Rev. Dr. Daniel Westfall, late business manager of the Pittsburgh Christian Advocate, a member of the West Virginia Conference, who had endeared himself to thousands of people in this region. The widows number five.

Another feature that marked the occasion was the presence as memorial orator of Dr. James Thoburn, Jr., of Pittsburgh, who celebrates this year his semi-centennial in the ministry.

BANQUET OPENS DRIVE TO SPUR BUSINESS

City Cheated of Rightful Trade Area, Benson Says; Dunn, Kaufmann Heard

More than 1,000 retail merchants from Western Pennsylvania attended a banquet in the Chamber of Commerce last night, which officially opened "Fall Market Week" in Pittsburgh. Speakers were Thomas A. Dunn, president of the chamber; W. P. Benson and Edgar J. Kaufmann.

Dunn sounded the keynote of the meeting, declaring Pittsburgh had survived depressions for the last 100 years and had come through them all stronger financially, and that the economic structure of the city today was fundamentally sound.

Benson said Pittsburgh, with its many natural advantages and its predominance as an industrial center, has neglected many phases of commerce within the area that logically is its trading radius. While the city had not paid particular attention to these matters, other cities have taken trade that rightfully belongs to Pittsburgh, he declared.

Kaufmann spoke on the future of retail merchandising, advising the small retailer to take courage and work until business had readjusted itself.

Sketching changes in retailing in the last few years, he advised better relations between customer and merchant. In complying with the various fundamentals of merchandising, he said the wise retailer will not take his inventory once a year, but once a month.

Tomorrow and Friday merchandising clinics designed to help the small retailer operate his business with more efficiency and economy, will be held at the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, with A. J. Luther and F. L. Anderson, merchandising experts of Chicago, in charge. Lectures and demonstrations will be part of the market week program.

During the remainder of the week displays of commodities to be obtained in Pittsburgh's wholesale institutions will be on exhibition in the chamber.

P. R. R. Train Sets New Time Record

Maintaining its fastest schedule, Pennsylvania Railroad's Liberty Limited has rolled into Pittsburgh at 11:44 p. m. on time three consecutive nights 9 hours and 9 minutes from Chicago. Its destination is Washington. From Crestline, O., to Pittsburgh, 190 miles, the train is handled by engineers of the Pittsburgh district who make the run in four hours. They are J. H. Kroegher, S. A. Grant and W. T. Cobb.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

YUMA, Ariz., Sept. 30.

They are trying to find a scheme to raise more money without hitting big incomes. Republicans' theory is that if you tax big incomes too much you will discourage him from making so much for himself. Didn't discourage him during the war when income tax ran as high as 70 per cent; some of the biggest fortunes were made at that rate of income tax. Any guy that has been lucky enough to have a bucket of water during this two years' drought shouldn't kick on handing out a drink.

Yours, WILL.

A cloud of tear gas hovering over midnight drama in Schenley Park: A faculty member's admonishment to an arrested freshman as a plainclothesman, tear gas mace in hand, stands by. Police used the gas to stop sophomore hazing of Carnegie Tech's freshman students.

WALDSCHMIDT DENIES CITY FORCING SALE OF HOMES

TAX COLLECTING METHOD FAIR, OFFICIAL SAYS

Few Properties Sold, Board Told After Protesting Of Hardship to Owners

No concerted drive is being made by the city to sell properties for delinquent taxes during the present depression, Solicitor Charles A. Waldschmidt said today in answer to a communication from the Lincoln District Board of Trade, requesting cessation of such activities.

The Trade Board informed Council that many residents of the Lincoln district were hard hit by the economic and financial depression and could not pay back taxes. Similar conditions exist in other sections of the city, the communication said.

Waldschmidt declared few properties had been sold this year and these only when every means to force collection of back taxes had been exhausted.

Waldschmidt said:

"We are not making any drive to embarrass property owners who find themselves hard hit by their inability to pay back taxes. Before the city attempts to sell properties at a sheriff's sale we use every method known to get the property owners to pay up. However, there are some persons who refuse to pay, do not give us an adequate excuse so we are forced to sell."

A checkup is being made at present, according to Waldschmidt, to determine how many properties have been sold during 1931, to compare the number with figures of past years.

SAFE CRACKERS MISS LOOT

Robbers early this morning were scared away when they tried to break open the safe in the office of the Swissvale Water Company, Ltd., 1675 Monongahela avenue, Swissvale police reported. The combination of the safe was knocked off and a chisel and hammer were left behind by the visitors.

Andrew Dabkiewicz, president of the firm, reported that a revolver, $0 stamps and a couple of bankbooks were stolen.

Priest Credentials Asked in Mexico

TAMPICO, Mexico, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—State government agents today visited priests on duty in Catholic churches of Tampico and other cities and required them to show credentials entitling them to remain at their posts under a regulation limiting to 12 the number of priests allowed to officiate in the state.

FUGITIVE SEEN, ELUDES POLICE

Arthur "Hunk" Ambrose, federal prisoner who escaped from custody of a deputy marshal by leaping through a train window in the Fort Wayne station, again evaded police who detected him riding in an automobile in the Hill district early today.

Ambrose and a companion were seen in an automobile at Sixth and Wylie avenues. Patrolmen Francis Hugh and Carl Williams were making their calls to the station house from a box at the intersection when they saw the men in the car.

One of the policemen leaped for the automobile while the other informed the sergeant that the car was speeding up Wylie avenue. A radio broadcast ordered scout cars to be on the lookout. The two men escaped by speeding out Bigelow boulevard.

2 Fire Insurance Companies Merged

Merger of the Allemannia Fire Insurance Company and the United American Insurance Company, of 7 Wood street, was announced effective today. The two companies have combined capital of $1,200,000. New officers are William A. Steinmeyer, chairman of the board; George W. Unverzagt, president; Elmer P. Niebaum, A. Frederick O'Daniel and Henry J. Wyatt, vice presidents, and Wesley A. Forest, Jr., secretary and treasurer.

Man Robbed in Tube To Pennsy Station

Held up by four young men in the Washington street pedestrian tunnel under Bigelow boulevard, George Maganlakis, of Warren, O., was robbed of $10, his watch and a railroad ticket. The thugs halted him as he was en route to the Pennsylvania Railroad Station to return to his home in Warren.

North Side firemen were called out this morning to extinguish a small fire in the plant of the National Casket Company, 1501-27 Reedsdale street. The blaze which originated in rubbish in the cellar, caused only slight damage.

Cannonball Man Killed at Fair, Act Forbidden

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Cliff Gregg, substituting for his brother as a "human cannonball," was fatally injured at the state fair when he was catapulted 60 feet through the air and missing the net, struck on his head. He died a few hours later.

Will Gregg, the brother, was injured Monday in a similar accident.

MOTHER OF OLD FILM IDOL DIES

Mrs. Ellen Costello Conness, 76, mother of Maurice Costello, motion picture and stage star, died today at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George W. Rodgers, 2226 Lutz avenue, Carrick. Mrs. Conness, married a second time after her first husband's death, had lived most of her life in Pittsburgh. Born in Ireland, she came to this country at the age of 15 and married Thomas Costello who died a year after the birth of Maurice, the father of two famous screen celebrities—Dolores, wife of John Barrymore, and Helene, wife of Lowell Sherman.

Besides Mrs. Rodgers and Costello, Mrs. Conness leaves another daughter, Mrs. W. T. Dabney, of Carrick; seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Beechview Store Head, Clerk Held Up

L. J. Beers, 717 Fruit way chain store manager at 611 Hampshire avenue, Beechview, and his clerk, Miss Margaret Malone, 1108 Hillsboro street, Sheraden, were held up this morning by two armed men as they were about to open the store. The robbers escaped in an auto after taking $69.03 from the cash register.

CITY ANALYZING WINE BRICK

City chemists today are analyzing a wine brick, which Police Supt. Peter P. Walsh purchased—while he awaited an opinion from City Solicitor Charles Waldschmidt on the legality of the sale of bricks.

Walsh a week ago asked for an opinion from the City Solicitor when it was announced that Philadelphia police had confiscated wine bricks, alleging their sale was in violation of the Snyder act.

The legal opinion has not been received by Walsh, and the sale of wine bricks goes on at a lively pace. Walsh expects to have the chemists' report ready when he receives the legal opinion and will be guided in his actions by the opinion.

Boys Admit Guilt In Train Wreck

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Two small brothers confessed today, railroad detectives said, that they had opened the switch through which a New York Central freight train plunged late yesterday, near Beech Creek, bringing death to two members of the crew.

The boys are Leonard Hahn, 12, and Arthur, 9. Detectives said the boys told them they had played with the switch and were unable to close it.

CHILD TRAINING STUDIES DRAW 60 PARENTS

Grown-Ups Seek Guidance In Rearing Youngsters In First Class of Kind

Enthusiasm for learning the details of child psychology was shown by a group of adults when they met for the first session of a "parents' problems" class at the Fay Allderdice High School last night. More than 60 grown-ups, most of them women, registered as regular night school students.

The class is being held under the leadership of Miss Ella E. Boyce, director of kindergartens, Pittsburgh public schools, and is intended to teach parents correct methods for remedying the minor faults of children. The sessions are discussions only—lectures are barred.

The course, to be held every Tuesday night through December 8, is the first ever offered to the public through the schools of Pittsburgh, and membership is free.

An outline of the course will be given at last night's meeting. It will include a general survey of problems in the training of children of pre-school age, followed by a study of causes of children's faults and their remedies. Junior may some day eat his spinach and carrots and drink his milk and like it. He may decide, too, that a little gentleman is a perfect charming chap.

TRUCK PARADE PLANNED TO AID CANNING

Lack of Sugar Only Bar To Continued Operation; Daily Output 17,000 Cans

With a parade of all trucks aiding in the project scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, members of the Surplus for the Needy Committee were going ahead today with the task of providing foodstuffs for the needy of the Pittsburgh district.

APPEAL FOR CASH

Urgent appeals for cash contributions were being broadcast today. All funds received in the project are for the purchase of sugar, and other ingredients according to Attorney Harry I Miller, chairman.

Capt. Wilson C. Price superintendent of the State Highway Patrol, said today that the patrolmen have visited 358 farms and have obtained pledges of contributions of 1,029 bushels of apples, 3 bushels of peaches, 33 bushels of pears, 19 bushels of plums, 92 bushels of tomatoes, 15 bushels of cabbages, 23 bushels of grapes, 10 bushels of beans, seven bushels of pumpkins and nine bushels of beets.

Contributions of sugar were received today from J. C. Trees of Sewickley. Attorney Miller said the lack of sugar was the only item which might call a halt to the activities of the cannery.

CANS RECEIVED

With donations of cans being unloaded almost daily from the American Can Company of Newark, N. J., operators at the cannery have been working 24-hour shifts.

A test was to be made today to discover the peak load which the factory can handle. To date daily production has averaged 17,000 cans, and an attempt will be made to reach the 25,000-mark.

False Fire Alarm Brings Fine of $21

A fine of $21.40 was imposed upon James Murray, 22, of 518 Center street, East Pittsburgh, when Murray was arraigned before Burgess James Beech last night, accused of sounding a false alarm, bringing out the fire department Sunday night. Fire Chief Charles Stack testified Murray sounded the alarm and fled, but Murray said he believed he saw flames in a building in Linden avenue.

'NIGHTINGALE' ACCUSES KAHN

NEW YORK, Sept. 30 (INS)—Mme. Lydia Lindgren, the "Swedish nightingale," told with tears in her eyes today how Otto H. Kahn, financier and patron of the arts, broke his promise to allow her an income of $3,000 a year.

The blonde singer, nervous and sobbing on the witness stand in Supreme Court at Long Island City, testified as the first witness in her $500,000 suit against the millionaire.

The income was to be paid, Mme. Lindgren said, in return for her withdrawal of a slander suit against Mme. Julia Claussen, operatic singer. Kahn agreed to give her $130,000, she said, declaring he also would continue her $3,000 allowance that he provided for her soon after she met him in 1914.

VETERAN ACTOR -:- Sheriff of Many Films But Star of None -:- AMUSEMENTS -:- News and Comment Of the Theater

Fred Burns, One of Screen's Interesting Characters, Never Found Glory

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 30.

Many of the most interesting characters in Hollywood never attain the brief glory of the spotlight.

Fred Burns is an example. No ripple of excitement greeted the news that this veteran actor would play the sheriff in "Freighters of Destiny," at R-K-O Pathe.

Yet Mr. Burns happens to be the man who played the sheriff in "The Great Train Robbery," the first [illegible] motion picture ever [illegible] that [illegible] hard-riding, chase [illegible] prepared the way for all the Westerns that were to come. Hatred for outlaws and [illegible] Billie into his first sheriff [illegible] because he happened to be in Chicago at the [illegible] with a stranded Wild West show. He could ride and he could master a couple of horses and fire.

That was 24 years ago. Since that time Burns has played hundreds of sheriffs for motion pictures. When I got to 200 I stopped counting," he declares.

It happens that none of these parts were important pictures. The spotlight has overlooked this actor. He has one unique distinction, however. He was the first white boy born in Fort Keogh, Montana.

LATEST GOSSIP

Billie Burke is attracting sensational business in her west coast tour with "The Vinegar Tree." In almost every town she has doubled Ethel Barrymore's receipts in "School for Scandal." Miss Barrymore is a favorite out here, too. Charles Enfield of Warner Brothers eastern office has arrived to fix and reinstate Hubert Voight as head of the studio publicity department. Voight recently was ousted after a fist fight with Darryl Zanuck in the presence of Jack Warner.

Ann Harding probably is in New York by now. She left here in the family plane for a two weeks' visit to Broadway. Husband Harry Bannister is working for Paramount so he had to stay in Hollywood. Ralph Forbes was thrown from a polo pony and knocked unconscious last week.

Clara Bow is writing a book about her career. The Fox Studio has scarcely a leg left to stand on. First Elissa Landi was injured when a soldier-extra dropped a rifle bayonet down on her leg. Next Warner Baxter had a muscle cut by a falling piece of glass. Shortly afterward Claire Maynard, an actress working in "Over the Hill," stepped out of a car and tore a ligament in her left ankle. And, finally, Winfield Sheehan's secretary caught her foot as she descended from a bus and received a compound fracture of the ankle.

DON'T ALL RUSH

For the first time since Mildred Davis quit pictures, Harold Lloyd is looking for a blonde leading woman. Incidentally, she will have to play the part of an actress for Harold's new story is about Hollywood. At this writing the field is wide open for the part. Barbara Kent, who was in the comedian's last picture, is ineligible because she is a brunet. Ann Christy, who was the heroine of another Lloyd film, also was a brunet. Then there was Jobyna Ralston. She has blue eyes and light brown hair, but photographed brunet.

TEOSE TENNIS [illegible]

As expected the [illegible] in the Pacific Southwest Tennis Tournament drew a record gate. One of the stars, John McCormack, presented one of the cups and Douglas Fairbanks, another, in brown suede shoes, attracted attention.

The film people were particularly keen over the brilliant duel between Henry Ellsworth Vines of Pasadena and Frederick J. Perry of England.

Saw quartet of stars. Two adjoining boxes held Dolores Del Rio, Cedric Gibbons, Adolph Menjou and Kathryn Carver, the Clive Brooks and Ronald Colman. The Harold Lloyds also entertained in their box. Just back of me were Nancy Carroll and Loretta Young. Among the executives saw Julian Lammle, John Considine and B. P. Schulberg. Hedda Hopper smartly gowned as usual. Saw Charles Farrell and Virginia Valli, Frederic March and Florence Eldridge drinking orangeade between matches.

The Los Angeles Tennis Club was the place to see the stars last week. They all go in for tennis and they all attended this tournament.

Oldtime Play For Screen

Countless people have swarmed over Winchell Smith's drama, "Turn to the Right," and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer believes there still is interest in the story of the faithful mother who put a lamp in the window every night to guide her erring son home.

They are dusting off this old hokum and in all likelihood will use it as a picture for William Haines when he returns from making personal appearances. Jimmy Durante, another probability in the cast.

'Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch' Filmed

Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch, sentimental adult-juvenile classic, has been purchased by Paramount for picture production. Chief juvenile roles have been assigned to Junior Durkin, who created the Huckleberry Finn role in the recent Tom Sawyer, and Charlotte V. Henry, stage child player who made her film debut in "Huckleberry Finn," and who will play Lovey Mars in Alice Hegan Rice's drama.

Magazine Story Next For Kay Francis

"The Heart is Young," recent magazine story by May Edginton, has been acquired by Paramount with Kay Francis and William Boyd spotted in the central roles. Stuart Walker, veteran stage producer who made his screen directorial debut on "The Secret Call," has been assigned to the new picture.

Ronald Colman to Use American Accent

After six years of picture stardom Ronald Colman at last realizes an ambition in appearing as an American, with an American accent. In Arrowsmith, Samuel Goldwyn's picturization of the Sinclair Lewis novel, Colman will not only use an American accent, but one that can be identified by experts as middle-western, it is said.

WALTER WINCHELL On Broadway

A Form of Criticism

"What became of that old gag about the waiter bringing a sharp knife for a tough steak?"

"It's on page 35 of last week's Saturday Evening Post."

O, Mr. Wilstach

From about in a Texas paper: This humbug has no more chance than a humming bird flying to the moon with the Empire State Building tied to its tail." Dick Stewart, Oldfashioned as a white-handled tooth brush. Charles G. Shaw. Crooked as a string. Flatter than a flat smile and as full of lies as a hotel register.

Broadway

"Your gag from Dick LaMarr about the reporter who failed to mention in his story that the guest of honor fell dead at a banquet because he felt the incident marred the proceedings has quite upset me," writes the bald Charlie Washburn. "I had hoarded the item since the merry 1913 days in Chicago and had written it into a yarn scheduled for next Sunday. But that isn't all.

"Walter Howey and some of the finer newspaper crowd had gathered the other evening. Mr. LaMarr said he was blue and would buy a round if someone made him laugh. I spoke up like a little major, more, as you know, in behalf of the others than myself. Mr. LaMarr laughed, but when it came time to settle he found he was short of cash. I settled, losing $6.75 and my pet gag."

Thancue!

Lou Meltzer, who says that it looks like a base on balls will be the nearest thing to a dramatic hit this season, was listening to a WABC broadcast the other 8:45 Broadway Time p. m. A neighbor interrupted him.

"Who is that fellow gossiping like that? He should mind his own business!"

"It's Walter Winchell," snapped Meltzer, "and that's his business!"

The Dope!

Max Eastman, the Dillingham exploiter, passes along the one about the American hoofer who was in a London music hall and went so good they walked him to hold over another week.

"Not unless I get $5,000 more!" he boasted.

"Will you please wait until I ask my colleagues?" begged the manager, as he went into conference with them.

Later he told the hoofer:

"The others have acquiesced to your demand."

"Oh, yeah?" barked the hoofer, "well, if that's the way they feel about it, I'll take the next boat back to America tonight!"

Nifties

From Norman S.: Give a man a bad name and he'll become an orchestra leader. Is he an old timer? Shucks! He remembers away back when adagio dancers were acrobats!

Oop!

Sidney Blackmer, the actor, relates that a chin-ema star came to New York from Hollywood, arriving at the theater showing her newest flicker all dolled up in orchids, ermine etc. She sat in back of some society women and after the premiere one of them turned to the star and queried:

"Well, my dear. And how did you like your picture?"

The star never changing her expression, the slightest, replied:

Sea Rescue In Hearst News

THE GLOBE TROTTER

Rescued at sea after clinging to their disabled plane for 158 hours in the icy waters the three Portugal-New York fliers, Christian Johannsen, Willy Rody and Fernando da Costa Viega, are seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News, showing in the Penn and other theaters. The story of their miraculous rescue is told in English by Johannsen, who vividly describes their sufferings when their plane, in which they hopped from Lisbon to New York, dropped into the sea. For seven days they lived on a little chocolate and a gallon of water drained from the motor radiator.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, comes out flatly against prohibition in one of the strongest statements he has ever issued. Dr. Butler declares unequivocally that the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment is absolutely essential to the welfare of the nation.

Helen Hicks, the 20-year-old Long Island girl, seen and heard as she wins the national golf championship in the finals at Williamsville, near Buffalo, with Glenna Collett Vare. There is a description of all the plays by the Globe Trotter.

Chester Seat, of Los Angeles, goes William Tell one better when he shoots a pipe out of the mouth of a pretty young girl, bursts toy balloons held between her teeth and finally does the William Tell apple act.

Frank Elhart wins the national bicycle marathon, which began in Elgin, Ill., and ended in Chicago, 47 miles distant. At the start 107 pedal pushers wheeled off, but few of them were able to finish.

A tragedy that shocked Europe is presented in the wreck of the Budapest-Vienna Express, bombed by political plotters as it was crossing a high viaduct near the Hungarian capital. Twenty-four persons were killed and 80 injured in the plunge of the engine and seven cars into a ravine.

Richard Dix Joins Sons Of Revolution

Of interest perhaps is the news that Richard Dix has been elected to a life membership in the California Society Sons of the Revolution. Dix's real name is Ernest Carlton Brimmer, and he is a lineal descendant of John Brimmer, whose antecedents date back to the colorful Colonial days in Albany and Van Rensselaer counties, New York.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"Once In a Lifetime," which makes faces at what is sometimes called the cinema art, as symbolized by Hollywood, will be in the Alvin next week, the schedule as usual, providing for matinees on the customary days. Custom also will be adhered to in the opening of the seat sale, that is Thursday. The company is large for a non-musical production, numbering 40, which is a lot of actors for one admission ticket. Moss Hart was helped in the writing of this satire by George S. Kaufman, who is just another of those Pittsburgh boys who have made good in the big city.

Small Timer says there are a lot of crooked men who are going straight—to perdition.

Joe Penner, whose local identification tag is "wanna buy a duck," evidently has deserted the poultry line and now has an elephant on his hands. Joe is trainer of pachydermata, as we scientific men call these thick-skinned beasts, in "East Wind," breezy ha ha new musical comedy coming to the Nixon for five days, opening next Tuesday. Seats will be procurable tomorrow at Mr. Brown's box office. It is another of those premieres which Harry seems to have become addicted to.

Yesterday we stated that "Mrs. Moonlight," coming to the Alvin, for the Professional Players, October 12, would be the first subscription play of the season. May we now amend that statement by publishing the fact that the Theater Guild will not open its season the same identical night? Thank you. Willa Edith Barrett and Sir Guy Standing are doing "Mrs. Moonlight." Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontaine will be doing "Reunion In Vienna" in the Nixon for the first time on any stage. The Guild subscription secretary is in the Nixon auxiliary box office right now.

Small Timer says the recount of the primary takes time and the result may be that some men shall get time.

SHORT WEIGHT COAL BANNED

A crusade against short weight coal merchants was inaugurated by Chief Inspector James P Bailey, of the Bureau of Weights and Measures, after several complaints had been received. Information will be made against offenders, Bailey said.

After investigation, Bailey and the entire personnel of nine inspectors of the department yesterday started definite action against the short weight dealers.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

Unsung New Yorkers—No. 92

PLENTY OF FOLKS insisted that George was not quite normal. They pointed out the fact that, although he was 30 years of age and single, he never wanted the company of a woman. When a girl approached him and wanted to be friendly, everybody knew that George would immediately insult her and walk off. Small wonder the folks thought that the man was just a trifle batty.

Those who understood, however, pitied the man and attempted to help him. If he rejected their help and he always did they didn't give him up as a bad job. They kept trying to advise and assist him. George, I imagine, never knew what true friends he really had. Why, they never even panned him behind his back. It was all most unusual.

The situation, though was more unusual than the reason for George's actions. The reason, as you undoubtedly surmise, is one of the oldest in the world. The man became a woman hater because a woman handed him a shock that seared his soul.

It was all very simple. A sweet guy and a trusting one, he went about with a girl for a year and then became engaged to her. He planned everything for the two of them, and he worked and saved accordingly.

Oh, what's the use of going into details? You understand. Although he had plenty of opportunities, he never looked at another girl. He had the one he wanted, and that was all he knew. If you had suggested an outing with another woman, he would have turned you down very coldly. And if you had so much as intimated that his sweetheart was going out with other men, I think he would have killed you.

His bride-to-be wasn't a bad girl and I suppose that, in her heart, she really loved George. But she never did quite see the harm in a little variety.

The result was inevitable. It's just as well it happened before marriage.

It took place in the customary fashion. George phoned and said he wouldn't be able to drop in that night. He found later that he could, however, and decided to surprise his little sweetheart. He surprised her all right.

George did none of these things. After the first shock, George closed his eyes and swayed slightly. Then he began to laugh. He laughed as though the wretched scene before him was the greatest of comedies. He opened the door and walked out. When he reached the street, he was still laughing.

But when he reached his home and threw himself on his bed the laugh was over. And he didn't laugh again for a long, long time. . . .

Thus it happened that George became a woman hater. It is hard to believe that a man would go to such extremes, because time is supposed to heal all wounds. George's case must have been the exception that proved the rule. Because as time marched along he became ever more bitter.

He would never go to the home of a married friend. If some of his pals succeeded in dragging him to a party, he always stood.

The man went to unusual extremes. Once, during a vacation, he went to a mountain hotel. He asked nothing more than to be permitted to roam by his lonesome. On the third night in that spot a girl approached him on the porch and told him very bluntly that she had fallen in love with him because of his icy attitude. George went upstairs, packed his grips and came back to New York that very night.

As I told you earlier in the story, George had some real friends. It was one of these, incidentally, who told me this story. They did their very best to show him that he was tossing away most of life's pleasures.

"Don't you see, George," they kept insisting, "that all women aren't the same as the one who double-crossed you? Do you blame the entire clergy because one minister goes off on a toot? Do you indict the entire stage because one actor is thoroughly bad? Of course not.

"Why not give some other girl a chance? You'd be much happier in the long run. After all, what can you lose?"

"I could lose," he would respond, "my self-respect. And that's something that I'm never going to do.

"It's useless, boys. I had my one blow from a woman, and I'm never going to have another. As long as I live I will always hate the entire sex. I don't want to sound melodramatic, but that's the way I feel. I know that my friends are trying to help me. I'm sorry. But when it comes to women, I don't want their help.

"I can live without women—and I will die without them. And nothing will ever change my mind."

And George meant every word he said. . . .

* * *

It wasn't so long ago that George became ill during the night. A doctor was summoned. After an examination, the medico asserted that George had appendix trouble. He urged him either to go directly to a hospital for observation, or to get in a good nurse immediately. George refused to consider the hospital or the nurse.

The following day, although the pain was not gone, he went to work. The same thing happened the day after that. On the third day, as the man stepped from a bus on upper Fifth avenue, he groaned mightily. Although his home was only a block away, he couldn't get there. He staggered a few feet and collapsed on the sidewalk.

As chance would have it, the collapse took place almost in front of a hospital door. They carried him in immediately and examined him. The poor mug never had a chance. His appendix had burst—and a short time later he was dead.

When they visited the hospital to perform their sad duty, only a few of his closest friends recognized the irony of the situation. For the name of the great institution in which George had breathed his last was the Women's Maternity Hospital.

The SPORTS SHOP Amputates Its Prices

Instead of $5.95

Know those Jonasson $5.95's? We are breaking the price to $4.95 for the future. Dozens of new styles came for this celebration: The 3-color top we had copied from a much, much higher priced original. Have it with burnt-orange, taupe and beige on brown or pale green, black and white on dark green. The bolero jacket model comes in tally-ho green or Spanish tile tops.

MAIN FLOOR

Debs or Business Women! What a Lot of Service in a

SUIT $25

With Raccoon

Our furrier, a woman of accuracy if ever there was one, says the fur collar alone on suit below would cost her $15. On texture wool crepe with fine silk crepe lining, side fastening and good lines. Colors and mixtures, 14 to 20.

How Does This Sound to You?

Silvery PERSIAN LAMB On Glowing SPANISH TILE

$59.75

Don't hold the reasonable price against this coat. It has the fur, the fashion points, and the good wool hoods of far, far more costly models. Have it in the dark fashion colors with black Persian Lamb or the flattering rose-rust tones of Spanish tile.

GOOD MORNING

We Now Present

By DARRELL V. MARTIN
Radio Editor

Darrell V. Martin

WE ARE OVER-JOYED to have secured exclusively for this city the services of Darrell V. Martin, Radio Editor of the National Broadcasting Company. Miss Dragonette, as you know, is the outstanding figure at the Radio Electrical Show in Duquesne Garden this afternoon and this evening. Her program will consist of songs requested by Pittsburgh readers, among which will be Kashmir Love Song and Only a Rose. She will be heard on WCAE at 8 o'clock tonight direct from the Radio Show platform.

DEAR RADIO FRIENDS: Darrell Martin has asked me to write something about my career and hours. I am deeply flattered, but frankly it seems strange to me to talk about myself. I should so much rather be hearing from you. So I welcome this opportunity to greet you and to thank you for your wonderful encouragement which has inspired me, and above all to thank you for the wonderful welcome to Pittsburgh listeners. But I really sing in most places and so this compelling fact has kept me disinterested in all other kind of career.

Of course flattering offers come and they delight me beyond measure—I am so feminine. But look! Here's a letter from a dear old lady in Oil City who never misses me, one from a big chap in Ohio who is practically confined to his room, here's another from a couple in California who always call me "their Jessica" and now a delicious shy girl from New Orleans who says, "Please send me two pictures of you and tell me all about your social and musical life."

Is any flattering offer worth leaving these dear friends? No nothing could compensate their loss. I agree with Conrad that something human is dearer to me than all the treasures of India.

My work with the National Broadcasting Company keeps me busy. I sing to you only one hour a week but most all my time is spent in preparation for our fireside visits.

There are rehearsals, singing lessons, dramatic lessons—I still study, you know, that's why I felt so funny when Darrell asked me to write about my career and hours spent arranging my programs.

It is no easy matter to find new songs each week—that I like to sing and that you like to hear me sing.

I engage no secretary. Somehow I feel that it would be ungracious to allow other hands than my own to answer your letters or send my picture when you ask for it.

But I forget myself. I'm not doing what Darrell asked me to do.

An advertising gentleman from Buffalo wrote me the other day asking me to write him my "trade secrets."

This rather puzzled me—I have never thought of my work in terms of "trade secrets." What I have learned about radio I regard as an open secret. I think I can describe it something like this:

I have learned that sincerity is the first requisite; that color of voice is all important. The microphone loves beautiful and gentle tones, a maximum of quality, with a minimum of quantity; that effects are rather a question of tempo than dynamics; that great concentration is required to put genuine feeling across; that the voice is compressed when released with perfect control and direction, like pressing down music and giving the essence, the perfume instead of the flowers.

The great truth back of radio is that the voice is the most powerful medium that we have. Radio has proved that the voice depicts the personality far more than the visible appearance.

What was Sarah Bernhardt but a voice?

The voice rather than your blue eyes, your brown hair and the clothes you wear your clothes, can tell all that you are.

It's nice to chat with you and thanks to you, Darrell, for this glorious opportunity of speaking to some of my listeners through your column.

Jessica Dragonette

Peg goes BARGAIN HUNTING

Bargain News Tips as gathered by Peg on her trip through the City

MANY of the best bargains, many of the greatest money-saving opportunities are lost because, until now, there has never been a really satisfactory way of telling you about them.

But now that "Peg" has gone Bargain Hunting, things will be different. She, and her assistants, are searching all over the community for bargains worthy of being listed in these columns. Sometimes she comes in contact with other items, services, etc., which she thinks are new, and real bargains. These, too, she will mention.

Read "Peg's" Bargain Tips every Sunday, Wednesday and Friday, exclusively in the Sun-Telegraph. She will show you how to shop more economically than you ever before thought possible.

Lavishly furred, richly lined coats are selling at Engelman's, 1409 Carson St., South Side, for $22.85. Some of these exquisitely designed models sold for as much as $39.50. Fur trimmings are of black and grey pointed fox, caracul and others. With such quality fabrics at such saving price, you'll do well to select your coat at Engelman Bros.

Your eyesight should not be neglected; cautions Dr. A. W. Mallan, Optometrist, 430 Market St. (above Cuba's). Your eyes examined and fitted with attractive glasses for $2.75.

An unusual used car bargain is the 1929 Studebaker Dictator 8 Sedan which J. A. Lewars, 515 Penn Ave., (Ch. 8378), is selling for only $675. Maroon finish, mohair upholstery.

For your week-end trip try the special excursion to Shenandoah Caverns, Va., offered by the B. & O. R. R. for $5. You leave Pittsburgh at 10:45 P. M. Sat., Oct. 3, and leave the Caverns at 1 P. M. Sun., Oct. 4, for a lovely daylight ride past Harpers Ferry amid beautiful scenery. The finest and most comfortable coaches will be used.

Only a few more of the $5 gen-uine solid gold diamond rings are left at Gallinger's, 929 Liberty Ave. Take advantage of this wonderful bargain now.

Models taken from higher-priced French patterns are featured by the Smart Set Shops, Jenkins Arcade and 309 6th Ave. $9.95 and $14.95 are two of the lower prices. You'll be pleased.

Better flowers at lower prices may be found at the Oliver Flower Shoppe, 5828 Forbes St., Sq. Hill. This shop's luncheon and party decorations are unusually artistic. The quaint and original Japanese gardens which make such lovely, lasting table pieces are also a specialty, and are as low as $2.50. Watch for their week-end specials.

20 dresses of early fall sheer materials, chiffon and fancy crepes, are for sale at virtually one-half the regular price. $19.50 values for $10.50. Miss Carton's French Shop at Penn Ave. and Stanwix St.

Keep your little one warm this winter with a Tally-Ho or Camelhair coat and hat set. Jay Kiddie Shop, 3rd floor, Jenkins Arcade, features these for $5.95. Sizes 1 to 4 years; boy and girl.

Get in condition for your next permanent now. A course of six scalp treatments, including violet ray and oil shampoo, costs $7.50 at the Peter Pan Beauty Salon, 559 Trenton Ave., Wilkinsburg.

Allendorf's . . . feature a 75c Blue Plate Luncheon that's unequaled for quality and quantity. Choice of ten meats and fish, vegetables, dessert and beverage. 25 Graeme St.

Nowadays smart women are not contented to look like everyone else. At the Alice G. Clark Shop, 302-303 Grogan Bldg., the $14.75 Fall dresses have that individual look. We saw there every fashionable material and color in sizes and half sizes, 14 to 44. Especially lovely were the black satin suits with white satin blouses. All $16.50 and $19.50 values, real bargains at $14.75.

Kiddieland, 233 Oliver Ave., only Pittsburgh studio devoted exclusively to child photography, makes unusual portrait studies of baby. Prices moderate, results pleasing. Six beautiful pictures, $5.

Schechter's Style Shoppe, 208 Keenan Bldg., is selling at one price, $16, lovely Fall dresses styled like $25 and $30 dresses we have seen elsewhere. Sizes 12 to 20. All alterations are free.

3 lbs. of Halpin's delicious SPECIAL BLEND coffee for 49c! What's more, 4 cans of Carnation Milk for 25c accompanies each coffee or 1 lb. tea purchase. HALPIN'S, 405 Market St., and 217 Third Avenue.

After the theatre or dancing, drop in at the Penn-Shady Restaurant, 226 Shady Avenue, East Liberty, to top off the evening. Special parties also. Call Montrose 6768 for reservations.

A complete room of wall paper, superior quality, is yours for 49c at The NEW FASHION WALL PAPER CO., 409 Market St. Offers 10 rolls of wall, 6 rolls of ceiling and 20 yds. of border material at this price. Re-paper your home at a low cost during this shelf-cleaning sale. A ½-pt. of enamel, paint or varnish given with every 2 or more rooms' purchase.

Need Socks? Get five pairs of men's fancy rayon silk socks for 89c tomorrow at the 89c stores of the Ideal Hosiery & Neckwear Co., 12th Sixth St. and 946 Liberty Ave. Real value.

If you want "something differ-ent" to eat for lunch or after the theater, try some Italian ravioli at Carlino's, 941 Liberty Ave. A generous portion for 25c. Also, lunch specials from 35c.

At the Higgins Lumber Co., 5300 Liberty Ave., doors, frames, sash and plasterboard in small lots and odd sizes have been marked approximately ⅓ off. They're real "buys." Grant 6575.

Rugs cleaned at Yardum's, Bellevue Blvd. at Craig St., are sure to satisfy. A special renovating and mothproofing process restores the original beauty, and 45 years experience insures quality work.

Do you know that Middleman's, at 226 Diamond St., is selling an A-1 A. licensed radio tube for 48c? What's more, it's guaranteed for 30 days. You can obtain any type of tube to fit any make of radio here. A set of 8 tubes can be purchased for $3.85. This opportunity to strengthen your reception this winter should be taken advantage of.

Bring in your furs and get an estimate on remodeling and repairing them. Excellent work at an unusually reasonable price. S. W. Robinson, 57 Phone Cedar 8776.

Ladies' Shoes, formerly $8 and $10, now selling for $3.95. Arch Rest shoes. All sizes, including AAA-AAA. Wolf's Shoe Store, N. S. Mail orders filled. Phone Fairfax 3329.

A Bee Vac cleaner for $23.50. This machine originally sold for $29.50. This includes extra cleaning appliances. Schenley Electric Store Fixture Co., 5621 5th Ave.

Everything for riding, at bar-gain prices, can be found in the new riding department at Horne & Wagner Co., 513 Liberty. Boots of imported English leather are $8.95; for ladies and $11.65 for men. Well-tailored breeches of English whipcord, with leather knee-patches are as low as $7.95 for ladies and men. Now everyone can enjoy a great sport.

It's easy to be a good dancer under the expert instruction of Rosalyn Kirkover, 5841 Forbes. She teaches all phases of dancing at unusually reasonable rates. Call Hazel 0770.

A New Empress Permanent Wave can rest beneath your new Empress Hat for $2.95. The Marvella Beauty Salon, 212 Oliver Ave., Suite 803, features this much-admired coiffure. No finger-waving required.

20 Early Fall Dresses . . . sheer materials, chiffons and fancy crepes are on sale at ½ the regular price. $19.50 for $10.50. The French Shop, Penn Ave. and Stanwix St. is the place.

Tender Lamb Chops—2 lbs. 25c
LEAN PORK STEAKS—2 lbs. 25c. Again STEWART'S MARKET, 406 Market St., helps you save on your meat bill for this week. You'll find this special for Thursday only. If you haven't shopped at this quality meat market, you should acquire the habit. This is the downtown market. Many other saving specials can be found.

McCloy's Brief Cases, $2.49. McCloy's, 642 Liberty Ave., are selling handsome brief cases of genuine cowhide, in either black or brown, for $2.49. They are made with three pockets, sturdy straps and a place for the owner's name. Look at your brief case—everyone else does. Maybe you need a new one. If you do McCloy's is the place to get it.

Winter is Just 7 Days Away. 4" double screen lump "Castle Shannon Coal" $4.35 per ton. Put your order in now. Snyder & Swanson, Inc. Phone Lehigh 9200.

An entirely unusual theater, the Avenue Cinema, 809 Liberty, now showing "Rhineland Maidel," the original 100% German subject. Language is no barrier to art and all will enjoy these Cinema masterpieces.

Enjoy your own party. Delicious food, lovely surroundings, and faultless service can be had without trouble at the Riverfield Grill. You can make reservations for luncheon, tea, evening bridge parties, select from a number of menus. Give a party easily and inexpensively entertaining at the Grill.

Is [illegible] because he [illegible]

And he [illegible] wom[illegible] Babies

DEAR MISS [illegible] men. [illegible] young [illegible] young man [illegible] nice home, a pretty wife and two or three babies to [illegible] All of which he thought would come to pass when he married Edith.

CHARGES SELFISHNESS

But he doesn't know his Edith.

Good night, all the music and nuisance and hard work of having babies. Not she. And—he loves her, he wouldn't [illegible]

Dick couldn't believe his ears. Surely she didn't mean it. Other wives didn't feel this way about babies. But Edith insisted she did—and that was that. So then Dick began to do a little thinking on his own. Could any woman love her husband and refuse to give him a family?

We put it to you, he asks. Here come the answers.

First there is a [illegible] married man who says with faith. He [illegible] has a secret to flower who's just too beautiful [illegible] to be bothered with babies.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"You ask [illegible] a man's wife when he wants her to suffer to prove her love for him." I say he doesn't. I say he is selfish. I love children as well as any man on earth could love them. But my wife dreads motherhood. The pain, the care and the constant worry that go with the rearing of children.

She has but one life to live and she has a right to live it as carefree as times and love will let her.

"If a love test must be a sacrifice of one's pleasure and desires, put the husband on the wire. Let him sacrifice his ardent dreams of children, when he knows that having them would mean sorrow, pain and years of care and drudgery to the girl who was silly enough to fall into his trap at the marriage altar. Just because she loved him.

A HUSBAND.

MOTHER IS PROUD

So that's the one the Lady Wife has sold "on the stranger"? Well, much as I disagree with her, I've got to hand it to the girl. She certainly knows how to run her racket. S'matter of fact, she's probably right—in her case. No baby is going to lose much by not having her for a mother.

Fortunately, the femmes aren't all like that. Here's "Ma" McG., who has raised nine blessings on her brave, living Irish heart. Is she wheezing about the pain and care—the "constant drudgery" of having babies? Not so's you'd notice it!

"Dear Sally:

"I've been reading about that young woman who doesn't want babies. Does she ever [illegible] Martin, [illegible] what is [illegible]

Of course babies mean work. But [illegible] a million times, so I know what [illegible] makes [illegible] this world [illegible] people in the world of [illegible] this home of ours [illegible] I [illegible] and [illegible] Father [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] Indiana.

Our home was [illegible] on the farm is built [illegible] and [illegible] They raised [illegible] where the father and [illegible] see them and talk to them and [illegible] their friends about the games and sports which we were all [illegible] interested in. They were worth every bit of what they cost us, and now we have them to be proud of.

They [illegible] manner with [illegible] mores [illegible] home and the [illegible] about to [illegible] of the floor when [illegible] are willing [illegible] MA McG.

CITES EGOTISM

But [illegible] what does [illegible] to [illegible] Vitality [illegible] to be [illegible] powered as it [illegible]

Dear Sally:

Of course, a woman [illegible] husband and [illegible] being perpetuated [illegible] this [illegible] days when [illegible] and [illegible] equal footing with [illegible] should she really have [illegible] submit to the torture and anguish of bringing children into the world? And then spend the rest of her life worrying over them just to gratify the selfish egotism of some would-be father?

For general [illegible] who people want children, it isn't for the child's sake. It's for their own enjoyment. Very few of them ever go so far as to consider the child. And few men ever stop to think about the woman's side of this baby racket. They claim that wanting an heir or an heiress is only natural. But as a matter of fact, it's usually just pure selfishness. They want them because it would give them pleasure to see a little copy of themselves.

A really loving husband is going to want to spare his wife all the pain and worry possible and to want her to keep sweet and fresh always. What do you think, Viva.

VIVA.

What do I think? I think that one "Ma" McG. is worth a million empty heads and their hollow hearts. That's what I think, sister.

Formalities of Friendship as Important at Home as Elsewhere—Fay King

By FAY KING

Just because it is the family does not lessen the rights of the individual.

It is as important to win their respect as that of outsiders.

Don't help yourself to a sister's or brother's possessions without asking.

Never fail to express your thanks, appreciation, or politely excuse yourself to your own as graciously as you would to strangers.

The control of temper and consideration you show in public is even more important in your own home.

Outsiders often seem more agreeable than our own because they respond to our "company manners" we discard at home.

Madge Interrupts a Quarrel Between the Boys

There was an unusual note in Henry's voice that I noted the instant I had finished telling him and Roderick in the room I had fitted up for Henry and William Katherine had said that they were with his father at the lily pool watching for queer fish which they call their own names and I had left her not a minute or two after that conversation. Evidently they had but just come upstairs, and I looked at and instinctively for my father because I knew that in our present stress of anxiety concerning the threat of the Chinese he would be but a few seconds behind them.

Yes, his head was just appearing on the stairs and I went swiftly toward him.

Everything all right, father?" I asked. "I see the youngsters have come in."

"Oh, you've seen them," he said in a relieved voice which betrayed the undue anxiety for the children which has been his since the night of the pretended holdup at the bank and the bizarre actions of the men responsible for it. That fantastic affair, nevertheless, despite its harmlessness which we later discovered, had focused so closely upon the mysterious threat of the Chinese concerning Marjorie's box that we all had been shaken, but none of us had been so upset as had my father. His great anxiety had led him to install a system of protection for the family which bordered upon fussiness, not in which all the rest of us dutifully acquiesced.

Oh!" I might have known.

He hesitated, his eyes attentively regarding me as if he meant to add something to his comment. Then evidently thinking better of it he put his hand upon my shoulder.

Are you too tired, can you look after the children for a little while? I should like to lie down."

You're not ill?" the fear which is always in my mind, voiced itself in frantic speech.

No, no, emphatically. The sun affects me a bit now and then, that is all, that old trouble you know. I suppose I never shall be rid of it."

I knew only too well what he meant, for I had witnessed two or three painful attacks of illness caused by his too long exposure to the sun. He had been the victim of a fearful sunstroke during one of his trips to the Orient and never had fully recovered from it.

Let me call Katherine or get you an ice pack—or"

The pressure of his hand on my shoulder increased and he swung me back and forth playfully.

Foolish child!" he apostrophized smiling down at me. "I forbid you to do any of those things, for I do not need them. You are distressing yourself uselessly. All I need is a nap, and I shall be perfectly all right for dinner. You will see a valiant trencherman."

I hope so!" I said worriedly, and he stooped and kissed me.

Run along to the youngsters, now," he said. "And, Margaret—"

Yes, Father," as he stopped.

"Nothing that will not keep for awhile." he told me smiling and evidently reconsidering the impulse for speech. Then he went slowly down the hall and into his room without looking back. If he had turned his head he would have seen that I had not moved from my place. I was worried about him, and I was also puzzled by his hesitancy, his obvious postponement of some comment he meant to make to me. That it concerned Junior and Roderick I was sure, and surmised that it also had to do with the room I had fixed up for Roderick's older brothers.

I walked back to the door of the room behind which my small son and his cousin were talking, and before I reached it I had understood what my father had meant to say, and had also interpreted the queer note in Junior's voice as he exclaimed over the "swell hangout" and added the trenchant comment, "Don't older kids have all the luck?"

The two younger boys were envious of this room! They longed for one like it! Were they, by chance, resentful because their room adjoined? Roderick's voice, answering Junior's gave me the answer to my question.

I'll say they have," Dicky's youngest nephew said. "The best we get is a room next to the baby's. We might as well be mouthhold brats ourselves."

See here, Rod!" Junior's voice was suddenly truculent. "My sister isn't a brat, and don't you dare call her one!"

That Roderick had not meant his epithet to aply to the baby I was sure. But Junior's jealous truculence upon anything pertaining to his small sister had made an issue which his cousin could not dodge.

"Who's goin' to stop me?" he drawled.

Me!" Junior's voice was hoarse.

"Yeah?" I wondered where Roderick had heard the drawled and moss-grown retort which he was uttering. "You and how many more?"

I came to myself with a rush. I had been so astonished at the conversation of the small boys that I had not realized what might be the consequence of the dispute. I flung open the door and rushed into the room just as Junior lunged toward Roderick with ludicrously doubled fists. I was almost tempted to permit those chivalrous fists to reach their mark, for Roderick was chanting "Brat! brat! brat!" but of course I could not "take sides," and I caught each culprit by the collar and swung them around, squirming and astonished, to face me.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

How Long Do You Expect to Live?

It is often said that statistics are misleading and inaccurate. But it is certainly true that the health statistics compiled today are far more accurate than those of former times. A great deal of valuable information can be gained by studying this material.

Dr. Copeland

Figures given by the life insurance companies are more than interesting. They reveal facts of great importance to the human race.

Of course these figures must be correctly interpreted or they are indeed misleading. For example, according to the tables prepared no one could hope to live beyond 96 years of age. Yet as a matter of fact, there are thousands who live beyond a hundred in spite of the tradition that man's age is three score years and 10.

According to the life insurance tables the expectation of life at birth is 58 years. Persons who live to 50 years of age have a further expectation of 20 years.

It is shown by these figures that since 1890 the average expectation of life has been increased 13 years. Of course this gain has been made in the younger age periods. The reason for this is easily explained.

The discovery of diphtheria anti-toxin and similar treatment for scarlet fever has gone far to lower the death rate. With better care of measles, chickenpox and other childhood diseases, infant mortality has been greatly decreased.

In addition to the decrease in the common diseases of childhood, preventive measures have helped a lot. For instance, the removal of adenoids and diseased tonsils has greatly increased the health and span of life of the child.

Investigations are being made concerning nutrition in its relation to the development of the body. This work, particularly in scurvy and rickets, has greatly lessened the sufferings of childhood.

There is no reason why similar studies in adult life cannot be made. They should be, because a study of the figures shows that premature deaths occur most frequently among the grown-ups.

This is due to the personal neglect of persons of this age. But whatever the reasons may be, chronic diseases of adults have actually increased. Such conditions as high blood pressure, kidney disease and heart disease still take a tremendous toll of the population. It is hoped that science will make such progress as to result in a marked reduction in such diseases.

Proper attention to diet, periodic health examinations and early attention to every illness will do much to extend life. It is hoped that modern progress will cause marked reduction in the deaths of persons past 40.

Household Hints

Jellies or blancmanges will set more quickly in hot weather if you stand the basin or mould containing them in a bowl of water in which equal parts of ordinary salt and washing soda have been dissolved.

Sea water stains on dresses or other garments of navy blue or black can be removed by rubbing the stain with a piece of the same material moistened with vinegar.

A lump of sugar put in to boil with green vegetables will preserve the color and improve the flavor.

Correct Manners

A Late Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been married for some time and as yet have not announced it. Now that I would like to announce it I am puzzled as to how to word the announcement. Will you please help me? BRIDE.

Under these circumstances it is best form for the bride and groom to tell their relatives and close friends, and to write notes to those relatives and friends who are not within calling-on-distance. The news will then spread soon enough.

This is better than to attempt to send formal engraved announcements the "lateness" of which always causes comment.

What to Say

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1 When going for a vacation to a friend's home does one take one's own wash cloths and towels?

2 What is the correct thing to say to a friend (young man) when he brings you home after your first evening spent together? K. L.

1 No, the hostess supplies these.

2. "Thank you so much for a very happy evening. I enjoyed every minute of it." If you wish you may add, "I hope that I am to see you again soon," or "sometimes," if you prefer. It all depends on the "hit" he made or didn't.

Informal Engagement Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1 I am going to have an engagement party in a hotel. I am planning to have it informal. Please tell me what should the groom-to-be wear?

2 How shall the invitation be sent, by telephone, little notes or engraved cards? There will be about 100 guests.

3 I am planning to have a buffet supper. Is this correct? M. P.

1 If the party is to be in the afternoon he would wear a business suit. If it is in the evening since it is to be informal, he would wear a dinner jacket, Tuxedo.

2 Little notes would be a charming and correct form of invitation. To have engraved cards would indicate that the party is to be formal.

BEWARE!

If You're Told Some Other Preparation Is the Same as GENUINE BAYER ASPIRIN

WATCH OUT

THIS warning is printed to put the public on guard against a deception which may be practised against those who seek genuine Bayer Aspirin for pain, headaches or colds.

We take this means of warning you, so you may be able to protect yourself and your family against the results of such deception.

BEWARE!

Other preparations, we are informed, have been offered at times to those who ask for Bayer Aspirin, and even represented in some cases as being "the same as Bayer Aspirin."

Watch Out! Remember that years ago doctors warned the public against "headache remedies," some of which are heart depressants and unsafe for many people to take.

Then remember how Genuine Bayer Aspirin came. And was acclaimed the world over by leading men of science as SAFE relief for pain, and was prescribed without hesitation by eminent physicians. For genuine Bayer Aspirin does not harm the heart.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Don't gamble—KNOW.

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

So when you want SAFE relief for pain, cold or headache, ask for BAYER ASPIRIN. You have a perfect right to ask for what you want. And an equal right to get what you ask for.

Look for the name BAYER on the package. And the word Genuine in red. Insist on Genuine Bayer Aspirin and refuse substitutes.

CLUB DATES ANNOUNCED

MISS ELIZABETH M'KAY MRS. HERBERT A. MAY

Miss McKay and Mrs. May, prominent in Pittsburgh society, two who will be among those of the social set at the Columbus Day races, October 12, on the George McNary farm near Greensburg.

Mt. Lebanon Book One of Most Complete

One of the most complete and, incidentally, one of the best looking year books of the season is that of the Women's Club of Mt. Lebanon with its Maxfield Parrish blue and silver binding. Not only are all the program of the club and its departments outlined in full, but there's a condensed calendar of every date with its corresponding group.

A page of information, the roster of officers, delegates, committees and department officers, one page announcing the past presidents, others giving the flag salute, the by-laws and the membership list and even a word concerning the season's speakers (an excellent idea) all supplement the program announcements.

At the request of the new president, Mrs. J. B. Nicklas, Jr., there is to be no president's reception this year. Instead the club will begin its season with a benefit bridge luncheon for the proposed clubhouse, holding it at the Keystone Athletic Club on October 12.

Eliminate Reception

Dr. George J. Wright, neurologist; Dr. Mary B. Harris, superintendent of the Federal Industrial Institution for Women at Alderson, W. Va., Mrs. David Denman, of Latrobe, a member of the state Legislature, and Florence Fisher Parry, columnist, are the speakers.

* * *

The Christmas meeting will be a pageant, movie and party for the children of the community; a colonial tea will mark a Washington bi-centennial celebration in February, and the May meeting will be an arts, crafts and garden exhibit and tea.

Fine programs have been prepared for the home, drama, music and garden departments and also for the reading sections and travel league, other units within the organization. Under the direction of Freeman Hammond, the drama department will organize into play producing groups, one of which will always have in readiness a play which can be presented almost without notice.

Its annual bridge benefit will be held Saturday at the Congress of Clubs by the Pittsburgh Women's Club of Ohio State University. The proceeds of the affair, for which Mrs. W. R. Speer is receiving reservations, will be used for scholarship work.

Benefit Affair

Mrs. Scott N. Watt will assume the duties of president of the Westminster College Women's Club at a luncheon meeting in the Congress of Clubs on Saturday. Miss Emma Mellor Campbell, first president of the club, will speak; Miss Ruth Houston will sing and Miss Laura Turner will bring recent news of the college.

* * *

The October meeting of the Women's Republican Club will be held next Wednesday afternoon at the William Penn Hotel. Mrs. W. L. Riggs, chairman of the state affairs committee, will talk on legislation. A board meeting will be held that morning.

The Pennsylvania College for Women Alumnae Association will have a tea from 3 until 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon in Woodland Hall to welcome the new students. Mrs. E. K. Coyle will be assisted by Mrs. Roy W. Walters, chairman of hospitality, Mrs. Charles A. Searing and Mrs. Harry M. Bauman will pour.

Welcome Students

A cafeteria breakfast in charge of Mrs. H. B. Smith and Mrs. E. I. Kibler will follow the first session of the adult education classes under auspices of the Alumnae Association on Saturday.

Miss Margaret F. Wood Weds New England Man

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wood, of Brookline, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Ferguson Wood, to Robert Harrell Tull, of Springfield, Mass., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Tull, of Monticello, Ill. The wedding took place in the Brookline Methodist Episcopal Church last evening at 6:30 o'clock. The Rev. E. Wilson Kelley officiated, assisted by the Rev. G. Lee Forney, of Lebanon, Pa.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore white satin and a tulle veil and carried Johanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley. Her sister, Miss Grace Wood, as maid of honor, appeared in pink satin and carried pink roses. Blue satin gowns were worn by the bridesmaids, Miss Eleanor Sproat and Miss Guinevere Knapp, of Warren, Pa., who carried pink roses.

Adolph Toepfer was best man, and Raymond Timmons, Gaylord Penney and Arthur W. Wood, brother of the bride, were ushers. Miss Lois Miller played the wedding music, and John M. Ferguson sang.

A reception in the Wood home followed. After a western wedding trip, Mr. Tull and his bride will be at home in Springfield, Mass.

Mr. Tull is a graduate of the University of Illinois and is a member of Alpha Kappa Lambda and Tau Beta Pi fraternities.

Isabel Matthews Married in Parsonage

Mrs. Thomas Oliver Matthews, of Shaw avenue, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Isabel Matthews, to Maurice A. Shaw, of Anderson, Ind., which was solemnized yesterday in the parsonage of the Unitarian Church.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, and the University of Southern California. The bridegroom was graduated from the University of Indiana.

Miss Helen MacCloskey was the bride's only attendant, and James Cronin served as the best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaw will be at home in Cincinnati, O.

Miss Grace McDermott Marries C. H. Jennings

Miss Grace A. McDermott, daughter of Mrs. Mary McDermott, of Upland street, Homewood, and C. H. Jennings, of Swissvale, were married September 21 in Bedford, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Jennings, after a wedding trip, will be at home in Irvine street, Swissvale.

Ruth Evelyn Hanley Married in New York

Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand J. Hanley, of Travella boulevard, announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Ruth Evelyn Hanley, to Philip Edward Keller, of Bridgeport, Conn., which was solemnized on Saturday in New York.

The bride is a graduate of Carnegie Institute of Technology, and the bridegroom was graduated from the University of Pittsburgh. Mr. and Mrs. Keller will make their home in New York.

The play which Miss Sophie Keenan is making from "Dombey and Son" for presentation by the Dickens Fellowship Players will be given March 16. The organization will open its season with a dinner next Monday night in the Fort Pitt Hotel, with the new president, Mrs. Florence W. Fairman, in the chair.

Council Will Study 'Children's Charter'

"The Children's Charter," which was outlined at the Washington child welfare conference, will be taken up as its year's study by the City Parent-Teacher Council, the first fall meeting of which will be held tomorrow in the Board of Education Building. Dr. David R. Sumstine will present the subject.

Democrat Deplores Credit Given Europe

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Extension of private credit to European nations at the present time was deplored by Arthur F. Mullen, of Omaha, Democratic national committeeman from Nebraska, who just has returned from a European vacation. He said:

"It is dangerous to extend private credit to other countries when their public debts are so large. The Federal Reserve Board should have and use the power to stop it."

American Engineers Pick New Officers

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Erle K. Ramsey, Oklahoma City, was elected president of the American Association of Engineers, succeeding James H. Griffin, of New York.

Other officers named at the final business session of the association's convention here were Victor Hosholder, Phoenix, Ariz., vice president; Harry W. Clausen, Chicago, treasurer, and Marion E. McIver, Chicago, secretary.

Liner's Mail Lost When Hawser Snaps

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Mail being transferred from the Ile de France to a mail boat was believed lost when a hawser snapped as the ship speeded toward her pier after leaving quarantine.

Several mail sacks coming down the chute were thrown into the water. Nine were salvaged but at the Postoffice Marine Division it was said some mail was missing.

McKeesport Student Sails for Jerusalem

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Voyagers among the large number of autumn vacationists include Mr. and Mrs. John R. Pipe, of Courtney, Pa., who sailed late yesterday for Europe on the Aquitania. The Pipes will spend the winter with relatives in Hastings, Sussex.

Another passenger was Joseph Cooper Levine, of McKeesport, a student of Jewish ministry, who is going to enter the Hebrew University in Jerusalem.

Pittsburgh Woman Elected By Foresters

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Miss Lydie Reddick, Pittsburgh, Pa., was elected supreme chief companion to succeed Mrs. Betty Gray, of Paterson, N. J., by the biennial convention of the Foresters of America. The other officers will be elected tomorrow.

Ohio Man Named By Shipping Board

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—J. W. Barnett, of Marion, Ohio, was appointed by the Shipping Board to succeed J. L. Ackerson as director of the board's Bureau of Contruction. Ackerson died suddenly a fortnight ago.

Barnett became assistant director of the bureau in June, 1930. Previously he had been vice president and general manager of the Marion Motors, Inc., Marion Steam Shovel Company.

Scalded to Death In Train Wreck

LOCK HAVEN, Pa., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—Brakeman Jeff Martin, of Jersey Shore, is dead, and Engineman W. F. Hudson and Fireman A. K. Kinkade, of the same place, are in Lock Haven Hospital suffering from serious scalds sustained when a New York Central freight train ran into an open switch about a mile west of Beech Creek.

Seven cars and the engine were overturned and officials who are investigating are satisfied that the switch had been tampered with, with the deliberate purpose of wrecking the train.

Ex-Federal Deputy Faces Slaying Trial

HUNTINGTON, W. Va., Sept. 30.—(AP.)—S. T. Lambert, Williamson, a former United States deputy marshal, was placed on trial in Federal Court here for the slaying of Prussey Lowe, 18, of Pike County, Ky.

Lowe was shot fatally while climbing up the bank on the Kentucky side of Tug River after breaking away from Lambert who had placed him under arrest on a Mann act charge.

Pennsy Engineer Quits After 42 Years

SHARON, Pa., Sept. 30.—After 42 years of service with the Pennsylvania Railroad, Charles Robinson, engineer, has retired. Robinson spent 41 years in the Sharon yards of the company.

UP-TO-DATE CLOTHES WITH TOUCHES OF BYGONE YEARS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—Even if we sometimes cannot exactly date any particular coat or frock, there is no gainsaying the charm and gracious lines of the new autumn clothes. And why should it be necessary to tag an historical epoch on to a garment that is quaint and picturesque with a touch or feature that is reminiscent of other days? If any particular garment was definitely of the Second Empire or of mid-Victorian days, it would look dreadfully out of place in a modern building. No, the new clothes are splendidly up-to-date. Designers are far too wise to go in for sartorial anachronisms. They use just enough of the bygone styles to give a different look and feel to ultra-modern clothes. They know, too, that women become tremendously excited over revolutionary style changes and that many models are purchased until the mode settles down to be itself without benefit of any historical personages or eras.

* * *

WE SHOW SKETCHES today of clothes that, while they may look reminiscent of the eighties, are perfectly up-to-date. The afternoon wrap owes its old-fashioned look to its fitted lines, cravat and ample cape. But it is undeniably new and very, very smart. The fur is lustrous black broadtail, the coat is sleeveless and the turn-down collar is cut in one piece with the fur cravat. Worn by a smart Parisienne walking in the Bois.

* * *

THE EVENING FROCK is by Chantal and is of soft, Pompeian red crepe romain. The bodice and the sash are reminiscent of the eighties, but the skirt and the shoulder straps are very new. Wide, loose panels are placed at regular intervals round the skirt, which has an even hemline.

B. P. W. Members to See Style Show Tomorrow

A fashion show will be the chief feature at the meeting of the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club tomorrow evening at the Congress of Clubs. Miss Auelande Hunter, of Kaufmann's, will direct a presentation of the correct mode for business, afternoon and evening wear. A musical program will be by Mrs. Dahl Westphal, accompanied by Harold Teator.

Hoover to Address Broadcasters' Meet

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—(AP.)—President Hoover will address the opening session of the ninth annual convention of the National Association of Broadcasters at Detroit, October 26.

The President's brief message will be carried by special wire from the White House to the convention hall and at the same time will be sent over the National and Columbia chains.

Federation to Broadcast Play Written by Member

In broadcasting "A Broken Law" during its weekly radio period over KDKA tomorrow, the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women establishes itself as the first federation to broadcast a safety play by one of its own members. The time of the broadcast, by the way, has been changed to 1:30 during the World Series. The cast includes Glenn Riggs, Claude Morris, Mrs. Walter E. Close, Mrs. D. Edwon Miller, Mrs. James G. Chalfant and Mrs. Philip B. Benz, district radio chairman.

Nail Head

Necklaces Bracelets Earrings

1.00 to 3.50

We've never seen anything quite like them before! They're made of a glossy black composition material that's most attractive in itself—and the small aluminum nail heads, arranged in various designs—give them a sort of sparkly appearance that words can't describe. Inspired, as you might guess, by the French Colonial Exposition, they're as new, unique, and supremely smart as you could want. And they look equally well with daytime satins or woolens, with black or bright shades.

There was [illegible] take a hopeful view of the prospect of relief for railroads now that arbitrations have been completed and [illegible] pected within a few weeks.

The weekly [illegible] reviews were [illegible] to the rate of [illegible] placed ingot [illegible] of capacity against 29 a week earlier, while steel [illegible] output has fallen to 29 per cent from 32 a week ago.

Construction [illegible] to bolster this [illegible] industry, while other lines [illegible]. Buying of railroad rails which normally adds about 500,000 tons to order books of the two leading producers at this time of year has been very low, although the Cleveland and Ohio has received an order for 45,000 tons. The report of the movement of revenue freight for the week ended September 19 showed a total of nearly 75,000 cars, from the preceding holiday week, but this was substantially less than the normal seasonal upturn.

Wall street interest in short selling was greatly stimulated by an announcement of one of the older stock exchange firms that it would no longer permit customers' stock to be loaned for the purpose of making short sales without specific information in each case. At any rate, professional short selling is said in brokerage circles to have been effectively checked for the moment by the stiffened surveillance of exchange officials.

The silver market was again [illegible] actionary, that metal losing [illegible] a cent an ounce. Traders were interested in Simon Guggenheim's prediction of a rosy future for the metal, but in want of tangible developments were disinclined to the buying side.

CHICAGO PLANS BIG ISSUES

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—A plan designed to solve financial difficulties of the City of Chicago was presented to Gov. Emmerson's Revenue Commission by City Controller M. S. Czymczak. The plan provides for issuance of $27,000,000 of bonds and sale to banks of $36,747,000 tax anticipation warrants. Proceeds of the bond issues will be used to pay off $18,195,000 of 1928 tax anticipation warrants held in the city treasury and 1929 warrants held by the public. Also to increase working cash fund by $12,000,000. It also is planned to refund $9,000,000 of city bonds due January 1, 1932, which could be done without increasing the constitutional debt.

Electric Power Output Declines

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Production of electricity in the United States for the week ended September 26 totaled 1,660,204,000 kilowatt hours, a decrease of 3.2 per cent from the [illegible] week of 1930, the National Electric Light Association reports. The decline was slightly less than the preceding week, which showed a drop of 3.4 per cent from a year ago.

Huge Sum Voted For Water Supply

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 30.—A metropolitan water district bond issue of $220,000,000 to construct an aqueduct to bring water to the city from the Colorado River has been approved by voters of the 13 cities of the metropolitan water district.

BRITISH EXPERIENCE

The dollar which [illegible] to gold is [illegible] a medium of exchange and a standard of value but is also a store of value.

The hoarders are using the dollar solely as a store of value for some vague future objective.

RISK OF HOARDING

Scientific analysis shows that the purchasing power of the dollar is unusually great now, both for goods and services and for all securities involving business risk.

With prices at the present low levels there is probably more risk in holding off than in making near-term commitments.

Funds now spent for the purchase of consumption goods or capital equipment, or indirectly made available to productive industry through the purchase of stocks and bonds, help to generate normal economic life.

On the other hand, hoarding deepens the depression and tends to menace the safety of economic institutions.

Those with the capital courage and discrimination to act along [illegible] useful lines during periods of abnormality are likely to be richly rewarded.

Wideawake Business Concerns Put Silver Lining in Clouds

By B. C. FORBES

FROM DIFFERENT parts of the coun[try] [come] bits of news [that] every indication [that] business conditions prospects [are] turn.

GERRY FITZGERALD [of] the May Company [chain] department [store] stores in Los Angeles, St. Louis, Cleveland, Akron, Denver and [others] having many offices abroad, comments on the experience recently mentioned here of a Middle West sales manager who complained that he found employes in one of New York's [stores] totally lacking in enthusiasm and eagerness to sell. From Los Angeles he writes [that]:

B. C. Forbes

"We are the largest store on the Pacific Coast in volume of business, size of personnel and as users of advertising space. We have built up to this stage only through the enthusiastic co-operation of our buyers and salespeople. We could not possibly be considered a 'fine' store without that spirit of employee enthusiasm which is the keystone of all department store operation success.

"Our advertising has carried exhortations to the public to the effect that even though they did not care to shop with us, they should shop somewhere.

"What we need, says Tom May, our president, is a new system of thinking. This alone will bring back a happy normalcy. There has been too much speculation and insufficient analyzed thinking. When business organizations commence to analyze their errors, they will be on the first major step to recovery.

"Stores have no way to sell goods except by having goods to sell. We are continuing to buy as heavily as possible. With others following suit, prosperity must return.'

"Suggestive selling by enthusiastic salespeople keeps our merchandise on the move."

E. C. Schmidt of the Union Pacific system writes that a 91-car special freight train carrying sugar pine lumber from Pinedale, Cal., has just moved to the East, saying:

"The chief uses of this lumber are for patterns and flasks in foundries and castings works, for high-grade soft-textured mouldings, for sash and doors and fine woodwork where beauty, strength, rot-resisting qualities and ease of working are essential.

"This mile-long train consigned to manufacturing plants engaged in these businesses, seems to me to indicate pickup in these lines whose product are such as probably would not be made unless there was a demand therefor."

I LEARN THAT the American Optical Company, of Southbridge, Mass., is doing more business in New England territory than it did either last year or even in 1929, with every indication that 1931 will prove the best in the company's long history in New England.

New England, after years of relative quiescence, is staging an impressive rejuvenation. In various fields it is leading all other sections.

PRESIDENT H. B. MAY, of May Trailers, Shreveport, La., after referring to "the almost pathetic silence of our so-called leading minds," expresses the opinion that "the extreme timidity of our bankers is hampering in no small degree the return of prosperity." Then he adds this cheering information:

"We have done this without borrowing one additional dollar. This new plant will start into production October 1. Already we have a nice volume of orders on hand.

"To accomplish this our organization has developed new lines of business, extending our operations, increasing our personnel and have worked like Trojans. We have not reduced our force, nor have we cut wages in any instance."

ONE MORE COMPANY is demonstrating how money can be made by mixing brains with business. A month before the Pullman Company introduced its "bargain" of furnishing a whole section to one passenger at the price of a lower plus half the price of the upper, only 574 sections were sold for single occupancy by conductors. In July 43,037 were sold, while in August, 40,945 sales were made by conductors to passengers who had boarded the trains with only lower berth tickets.

"In 1930 the Pullman Company carried 30,800,000 passengers, who traveled 12,811,000,000 miles. Only one of these passengers was killed."

If only automobile and air travel could be made half way as safe!

WALL STREET continues to maintain its unenviable reputation as being the bluest spot in America. Somebody is buying all the stocks now being sold on Wall Street at current bargain prices.

Bond Market to Develop Speculative Interest

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE DEVELOPMENT OF A SPECULATIVE interest in bonds is seen in the near future by students of financial affairs. The declines in the market prices of fixed income securities have placed many types of bonds in a class with stocks so far as current values are concerned.

Bonds of leading corporations are selling at large discounts from their par values. This gives the purchaser a large yield with the prospect of an advance in price to par as business conditions recover.

The prolonged business depression has dispelled the investment atmosphere from all but the highest grade bonds. In some cases the sharp drops in bond quotations have been attributable to actual defaults in interest payments or the fear of defaults. But in the vast majority of instances there is little danger of any such drastic developments.

Bond Record Good

THE DECLINE IN BUSINESS activity has been sharply reflected in corporation earnings. This naturally has affected the price of stocks. But the outstanding American corporations are still earning their interest requirements on their funded debt and have the resources to continue interest payments even if the depression lasts for a long period of years.

Current market prices do not reflect any great degree of anxiety about the solvency of the companies behind these bonds. They represent distress selling and the reduction in the capacity of investors to absorb new bond issues.

The break in the bond market does not indicate that the investment public is afraid that the great majority of issues is not sound. It has been due to the fact that business conditions have forced more bondholders to dispose of their securities than there are individuals to buy them.

Bond Recovery Seen

THE ADVOCATES OF BONDS as speculative media under present conditions take the following line of reasoning:

"Any recovery in business will improve the background of bonds and will stop the occasional defaults which may tend to undermine confidence. Any recovery in the stock market will be preceded by or accompanied by a recovery in bonds. The present condition of the bond market is due to entirely abnormal business conditions, which are not likely to last over any particularly long period."

During the late lamented bull market, investment interest in bonds was sidetracked to stocks except where banks, insurance companies and the most conservative types of individuals were concerned. Persons with surplus earnings to invest saw the long range possibilities of participation in the ownership of prosperous corporations through common stocks. They overlooked the fact that the rush for this type of security might have discounted the industrial development of this country for many years. Their appetite for bonds declined.

Prestige to Return

THE RUDE BLOW DEALT to the public esteem of common stocks by the bear market will tend to re-establish the prestige of bonds in the future. The investing public will be back in the bond market when business recovers to give it surplus funds. In the natural course of events bonds will be restored to their former condition of stability.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Although the bond market fluctuated [irregularly today, steadiness and] [even strength appeared in spots.] [Trading was much less active than] [yesterday.]

STEEL RESISTS PRICE CUTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say:

A few large individual orders, mainly for public works projects, are conspicuous in an otherwise predominantly dull iron and steel market.

In general buying of iron and steel is still exceedingly cautious, although seasonal forces have resulted in slight gains in demand in certain districts. Recent wage reductions by steel companies have proved an unsettling influence, increasing the pressure for price concessions and causing the postponement of purchases except for urgent needs. With steel producers strongly resisting current efforts to undermine the price structure, the fact that demand is showing any gain at all is regarded as an encouraging indication. The betterment is reflected in ingot production, which has risen to 31 per cent from 29 per cent a week ago.

A new price factor of undetermined importance has been introduced by the fall of pound sterling from the gold standard. Already the depreciation of the pound has had the effect of reducing Great Britain's imports and stimulating her domestic and export trade.

Automobile production in September is estimated at 180,000 cars, and October output is expected to drop to about 160,000 units. The poorest month of the year was January, with a total of 178,347 assemblies. The Iron Age composite prices for pig iron and finished steel are unchanged at $15.42 a ton and 2.116c a pound respectively.

Central Loadings Decline for Week

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—New York Central Lines during the week ended September 26 loaded 49,439 cars of revenue freight compared with 51,850 in the previous week and 65,599 in the like 1930 week.

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Wabash Railway handled 14,481 revenue cars during the week ended September 26, compared to 14,585 in the preceding week and 18,313 in the like 1930 week.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The St. Louis and San Francisco Railway loaded 14,694 revenue cars for the week ended September 24 against 14,711 in the previous week and 20,497 the same week of 1930.

Wall Street Expects Data on Short Sales To Be Made Public

Just what part has short selling of its more vicious counterpart, "bear raiding," been playing in the disheartening downward flight of security values in the speculative market? Wall street itself is beginning to take the stand that in view of widespread public discussion of the subject at the moment those in a position to do so should move to enlighten the general trading public on the matter to the best of their ability. The Stock Exchange for more than four months past has been gathering extensive data on short sales through the medium of its questionnaire first called into play late in May. Quite a few people are moved to express the opinion that the institution's authorities after a study on the subject over so long a period should have very definite knowledge on the subject.

As had been widely anticipated the recently announced wage cuts put into effect by the leading steel producers is resulting in something of a severe test of the price situation in that industry. Unsatisfactory general conditions ruling in the steel world at the moment, namely the lack of anything in the way of substantial demand except for steel to be used in public works projects, makes the test more crucial than it might otherwise be. Producers, however, are showing strong determination to resist such efforts to undermine prices, realizing, of course that anything in the way of concession would tend to obviate the benefits of lowered costs.

There are now only two companies with a common stock valuation of a billion dollars or more now on the Stock Exchange. They are American Telephone, with slightly less than 2½ billions, compared with more than four billions in 1929, and General Motors with slightly over one billion as against four billions in 1929. Companies which had previously been in this select circle back in 1929 were Consolidated Gas, Du Pont, General Electric, New York Central, North American, Pennsylvania, Standard Oil of New Jersey, United States Steel and Woolworth.

Simon Guggenheim, president of American Smelting and Refining Company, expressed the opinion that in consideration of the smaller stockholders dividends should be maintained so long as it was possible for companies to do so without the necessity of borrowing to continue to pay them. "For what better purpose," he said, "could surpluses built up in good years be used than in the maintenance of dividends, thereby creating good will and confidence of stockholders. Our earnings of course have been affected by the depressed state of conditions in the non-ferrous industry, but taking into account the depth of the depression, the company has not done so badly. Any improvement in the copper industry will now depend on a general improvement of world conditions and as yet this is not in sight."

Under ordinary circumstances the heavy selling activity, together with the sharp decline in prices at the close of yesterday's session might be regarded in the nature of a temporary climax to be followed by an automatic rally. However, the market has upset so many precedents prescribed for it during the present phase of the decline, that no responsible source cares to venture any prognostication on what stocks will do from day to day.

The old stand-by is that commitments made in selected common stocks at current levels will work out profitably in time. It is again pertinent to note, that while the accepted market averages have entered new low ground successively for the past three days, the rails are still above their bottoms established on September 19. The consensus of opinion is that when the long delayed rallying movement sets in, the carriers will be well in the vanguard of the upswing.

Ernst Feels Out of Place at Rich Uncle's Home

CHAPTER XVIII

We set off down the High street. Kosole is telling us that he proposes to repair his pigeon loft this afternoon. He used to breed carrier pigeons and black-and-white tumblers before the war, and he is thinking of starting again now. That had been his one idea out at the front.

"And what then, Ferdinand?" I ask.

"Look for work," says he bluntly. "I'm a married man, you know. Always got to keep the pot boiling now."

Suddenly, from the neighborhood of St. Mary's Church comes a sound of shots. We listen. Rifles and service revolvers, says Willy professionally. Two revolvers, by the sound of it.

Willy stops short in front of a gentlemen's outfitters. In the window is exhibited a garment made out of paper and stinging nettle instead of cloth. But that interests him little. On the other hand, a row of faded fashion plates set out behind the suit of clothes holds him spellbound. He points excitedly to one picture of an elegant gentleman with a goatee beard lost in eternal converse with a huntsman of sorts. "Know what this is?"

"Rot!" interrupts Willy impatiently. "That's a cutaway, that is. A swallowtail, you know. Absolutely the latest thing. And do you know what's just occurred to me? I'll have one of them made for myself from this overcoat here. Take it to pieces, you see, and dye it black, remodel it, cut away the bottom part here—bong! I tell you!"

Synopsis

Ernest, who enlisted when a schoolboy, tells the postwar story of a group of war comrades who march home when peace is made, to find everything changed—themselves most of all. Only their friends and their war memories seem real. Soon after getting home Ernst looks up his friends. A card game is under way at the barracks, where news reaches them that Seelig, a former sergeant-major whom they dislike because they believe he was responsible for the death of Schroder, one of their number, is a bartender at a local cafe. They hasten to find Seelig, and at sight of him they see in memory the night and the trenches where they buried their comrade. Kosole, who holds a special grudge, attacks Seelig and comes off victor. Then the group leaves and scatters. Next day they apply at the barracks for greatcoats and other supplies and fare forth laden with clothes.

Now Go On

LUDWIG VISITS

He is obviously in love with his idea. But Karl damps his ardor. "Have you the striped trousers to go with it?" says he loftily.

Willy is nonplussed a moment. "I know. I'll pinch the old man's," he decides at last. "And his white waistcoat for weddings as well—what will you think of Willy then, eh?" Beaming with pleasure, he surveys the whole row of us. "We'll see life yet, lads, eh?"

I return home and give half of my demobilization pay to my mother. "Ludwig Breyer's in there," says she. "He's waiting in your room."

"He's a lieutenant, too," adds my father.

"Yes," I reply, "didn't you see?"

Ludwig seems rather better. His dysentery has improved. "I maintain—"

"Ludwig, I just wanted to borrow some books from you, Ernst," he says and smiles at me.

"Take whatever you like, Ludwig," I say.

"Won't be wanting them yourself, then?" he asks.

I shake my head. "Not at the moment, anyway. I tried to read a bit only yesterday. But it's queer, you know—I don't seem to be able to concentrate properly any more. By the time I've read two or three pages I find I'm thinking of something else altogether. As if one were looking at a blank wall, you know. But what is it you want? Novels?"

"No," says he, selecting a few books for himself. I glance at the titles. "Heavy stuff, eh, Ludwig?" I say. "What are you going to do with that?"

He smiles, somewhat embarrassed; then hesitatingly he says: "Well, Ernst, you know out there a lot of things would keep coming into my head, and I could never get the rights of them somehow. But now it's all over, there's a heap I'd like to understand—I'd like to know, for instance, what mankind is up to that such a thing could happen; and how it all came about. That raises a lot of questions. Questions for us, too. We had a very different notion of what manner of thing life was before, if you remember. There's a lot I'd like to know, Ernst."

I point to the books. "Think you'll find it in there?"

"I mean to try, anyway." I read from the morning till night now.

He soon takes his leave and I still sit on, lost in thought. What have I been doing all this time? With a feeling of shame I reach for a book. But soon I let it fall again and am gazing out the window. I can do that for hours together, just look out into vacancy. It used to be different before; I always knew then what I would do.

My mother comes into the room. "Ernst, you are going to Uncle Karl's tonight, aren't you?"

"Yes, I suppose so," I reply rather disgruntled.

FOOD SCARCE

"He has often sent us things to eat," she says prudently.

I nod. From the window I can see the twilight beginning outside. Blue shadows are lurking in the branches of the chestnuts. I turn around. "Did you often go down by the poplars in the summer time, mother?" I ask suddenly. "That must have been beautiful."

"Yes, Ernst, not once all this year."

"Why not, mother?" I ask in surprise. "You used to go there every Sunday before."

"We gave up going for walks altogether," she replies quietly, "one is always so hungry afterwards. And you see, we had nothing to eat."

"Ah so—" I say slowly, "but Uncle Karl, he always had enough, I suppose?"

He often sent us some, too, Ernst."

All at once I feel utterly dejected. "What was the good of it all, mother?" I say.

She strokes my hand. "It must have been for some good, Ernst. The Father in heaven knows, you may be sure of that."

Uncle Karl is the famous member of our family. He has a villa and was chief paymaster during the war.

Wolf accompanies me to the house, but he must stay outside—my aunt dislikes dogs of any sort. I ring.

An elegant man in a dress suit opens to me. "Good evening, sir," I say, rather taken aback. Then it occurs to me, he must be a domestic. I had quite forgotten such things in the army.

The fellow looks me over as if he were a battalion commander in civvies. I smile, but he does not smile back. When I take off my greatcoat, he raises his hand as if to help me. "Why," I say, to regain his favor, "surely an old soldier can do that much for himself, eh?" and I hook my things upon a peg.

Without a word he takes them down again and with a superior air solemnly hangs them on a peg near by. "Poor worm!" I think to myself and pass in.

Uncle Karl comes toward me, spurs clinking. He greets me condescendingly. I merely belong to the ranks. I look at his flashing regimentals in astonishment. "What's on today?" I ask by way of making a joke. "Roast horse?"

ILL AT EASE

"Well, wearing spurs to dinner," I reply, laughing.

He gives me a sour look. Without meaning to, I seem to have touched a sore spot with him. It is often so with these army office pen-pushers—they are prone to swords and spurs.

Before I can explain to him that I meant no offense, my aunt comes up, rustling. She is still as she used to be, flat as an ironing board, and her little black eyes shining as ever, as though they had been newly polished on a button stick. While she is showering me with a flood of words, her quick eyes are glancing continually here, there and everywhere about the room.

I am rather embarrassed. Too many people for me, too many women and, worst of all, too much light. The most we ever had up the line was an oil lamp. But these chandeliers here, they are as merciless as bailiffs. One can hide nothing from them.

I have to shake hands with a lot of people and begin to perspire. The men here are quite different from us out there. I feel as cumbersome as a tank in comparison. They behave as if they were sitting in a shop window and talk as if they were on the stage. I try cautiously to hide my hands; the grime of the trenches is ground into them like poison. I dry them off surreptitiously on my trousers, but they are immediately wet again when I have to shake hands with a lady.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Man Uses Unique Scheme in Proposing to Girl

Dancing in the Dark

Polly Larson saw Mrs. Porter fastening brace sticks to her double hollyhocks. She sauntered across the street for a chat, and for information.

"What's this I hear about another male person to be added to our crowd, Emmy?" she asked.

Mrs. Porter regarded Polly with a smile that veiled the suspicion in her mind. Polly was somewhat noted for her interest in every new man who came within her range.

"Well, yes, I always regarded Monty as considerable of a male person," Mrs. Porter answered.

"Monty, eh? You know him as well as that? Goodness, don't tell me he was one of your old sweethearts?"

Mrs. Porter laughed outright at this.

"That's a sure sign of true love, I've heard."

Polly stared at Mrs. Porter in amazement.

"Yes," Mrs. Porter maintained, calmly. "Monty Renson is my brother and he is coming here. But tell me, how ever did you know? Dick's away." Dick was her husband—"and I haven't told a soul."

"I have inside information," Polly declared.

"Maryanna Tucker!"

Polly nodded.

Maryanna Tucker was the postmistress at Weed's Mills, where on the lakes were located a pretentious summer hotel and a couple score of cottages.

GIRL PROOF

"She would! It's a wonder Monty didn't write something silly and misleading—he will use postal cards because they save time. He just wrote that he would be with me next week."

"What's he like?"

Polly Larson giggled at this.

"Girl proof? Humph—I can cure the worst case of that. When I go after a man I'm like the Royal Mounted. I always get him."

"And some day you will fall smack-slap-bang in love with some man and he will be the one man you cannot capture!"

Polly frowned.

"An old woman who read tea cups told me that same thing." Polly wasn't one to be downcast for long. She cheered up at once. "Anyway, I promise not to break your brother's heart and make a hermit of him."

That's rich, wait until you see him; he's nice and polite and can dance and play contract and he knows all of his manners. He seems to know women, too; he just won't take any more than a polite interest in them. He isn't afraid of them. He isn't hard boiled. If he hated women there would be a chance but when a man doesn't care enough for any woman to either like or dislike her, he is just hopeless."

PRODUCES PICTURE

"Ummm," Polly murmured, doubtfully.

"No like?"

"Can't tell, but even if you do warn him that a red-headed woman is going to be on his track, it will do no good. If there is one great pleasure I have, it is making girl-proof young men fall down at my feet and adore me."

"Your inferiority complex amazes me, Polly."

"All right, you'll see."

Polly had run into town for over night to attend to some financial matters, when Monty Renson arrived. His sister decided that she would tell him nothing about Polly and her threats.

Monty had changed considerably. The spectacles had been relegated, the fuzzy hair was trimmed and sleek. His face was bronzed and he filled his English tweed suit to perfection.

"Monty, you old dear," his sister said, "you amaze me; you are getting good looking!"

"Women have a certain valuable place in nature's scheme of things. I do not underestimate their worth and necessity, only your little baby brother Monty"—he stood six feet and weighed 190—"is immune. He has no need or use for them. What's under your pretty hair, Sis—a scheme to marry me off to some friend of yours?"

"Absolutely not, Monty. Only you'll be nice—we have a dozen splendid young women here. They will expect you to dance, to canoe, to play tennis and contract and so on and so forth.

"If the 'so on and so forth' means petting, that's out. Otherwise I shall not displease you."

Polly had not learned, upon her return the next day, of the arrival of Mrs. Porter's brother. She went over with a package that contained four bottles. The bottles contained what goes well with orange juice, ginger ale or what have you. Mrs. Porter had loaned some to Polly for one of her parties and she was repaying it.

INTRODUCED TO GIRL

"Oh!" Polly exclaimed.

"I presume you are looking for Mrs. Porter—she is in the house," he said.

Polly stammered her polite thanks and dashed in. Mrs. Porter was reading yesterday's city papers.

"For heaven's sake, Emmy, where did you get the Adonis? Who is he? Isn't he the most wonderful man you ever saw!"

"What Adonis?"

"Out under the wistaria vine—when I almost ran into him and got an eyeful my heart came up and choked me and I had the queerest feeling 'eh, me about him."

"Oh, Monty, you mean."

"That demi-god out there doesn't look any more like this than I look like Helen of Troy!"

"Oh!"

Monty came in just then, singing to himself. He was singing "Dancing in the Dark." His voice was good. Mrs. Porter called him in and introduced him to Polly.

"G-glad to meet you, Mr. Renson," Polly answered. Mrs. Porter couldn't believe her eyes and ears. Polly Larson was positively rattled upon being introduced to a man.

"I must run along, Emmy," Polly turned to Monty. "I—I will see you again—glad to have met you," she murmured.

Mrs. Porter's surprise was not over. Polly Larson did not go on the trail of Monty. She was shy and embarrassed whenever with him.

"Queer little girl." Monty told his sister the morning after the little colony dance. "darned queer girl. Most of the others tried to date me up and handed me the ancient line of guff, but this Polly creature didn't have any line at all and I'm darned if she wasn't trembling when I danced with her."

That was all Mrs. Porter would say. It was not for her to explain to her brother that heretofore Polly had gone after every man and dragged him to a proposal, whereupon she had said her "No, thank you, sir," and gone after the next man.

Two more weeks passed. Polly danced a little, canoed a little and played bridge now and then with Monty. She was always demure, quiet and seemed to blush almost constantly.

"Darned if she isn't a cute kid, Sis," Monty told Mrs. Porter. "First girl who ever interested me, but why is she afraid of me?"

"Probably she is—er—just afraid of you," Mrs. Porter said, lamely. She didn't have the courage to tell him that she believed Polly Larson had fallen in love at last, and with her brother.

When there was only one more week for Monty and they were having a house party at Mrs. Porter's, with dancing, the musicians began to play, "Dancing in the Dark." Someone snapped out the lights.

Polly Larson was sitting over in a corner. A man came and sat down beside her.

POLLY HAPPY

"Listen, Sis," he said, "help me out, go tell that little beauty Polly Larson that she needn't be so scared of me. Honestly I sure want that girl, but I don't want a wife who is always afraid of me."

Then, patting Polly's arms in a brotherly manner, Monty went away from there before the lights went on again.

"I'm going to kiss you, and if you scream for help I shall kidnap you, Polly," he said.

Polly grabbed him and kissed him.

Darling—that wasn't your sister you spoke to when they were dancing in the dark—it was little me—and—and—I'm so happy that I want you to kidnap me."

Monty kissed her again, and he had sense enough never to tell her that he knew darned well it wasn't his sister he was speaking to, for he was the one who had snapped out the lights and then gone over to Polly.

FRISBY WARNS AGAINST WOMEN

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Congressman Frisby today told visiting school teachers to beware of women. He exhibited the above lantern slide to illustrate his point. "The picture," said Frisby, "shows plainer than words how a beautiful Spanish senora almost prevented me—in fact did prevent me—from participating in the Spanish-American war. She used her wiles to get me to go to Yale instead. We were photographed together on the famous Yale fence. She is seen asking me to give away the football signals, which she afterwards sold to Harvard at a handsome profit. Of course I gave her the wrong figures, thus permitting us to win the game and a six-months' subscription to the Youth's Companion."

A Victory for Decency

The Grand Jury's First Report on Election Frauds Will Tend to Prevent Cheating Next Time.

Regardless of the final outcome the grand jury's first report on the results of its investigation of the primary election is bound to have a salutary effect.

The grand jury recommends the indictment of 18 persons against whom prima facie cases of election cheating have been presented.

This in itself is a triumph for decency, as it serves notice that such bare-faced fraud as there is good reason to suspect was committed in the primary is not to go unchallenged.

The grand jury and District Attorney Andrew T. Park have worked hard in the investigation of these cases. The jury was called into extraordinary session within a few days after the primary and at the first meeting stayed up all night.

The jurors and District Attorney Park and his staff have rendered an important public service and are entitled to the citizens' thanks.

Wrecking Foreign Credit

Internationalists Favoring Debt Cancellation Fail to See Payment Is Essential to Good Will

Too frequently, these days, some rambling internationalist returns from foreign shores to iterate—for the dubious benefit of foreign friends—that the war debts of our late allies in Europe must be canceled.

Of course, not forthwith. The MORATORIUM must first be extended. Then we must RECONSIDER the whole subject, preparatory to REVISING the agreements for repayment, before we allow the dread word "CANCELLATION" to be uttered.

Our amateur internationalists have learned well this formula invented by the astute self-minded bankers whose heavy loans to Europe can be rescued ONLY BY SHIFTING THE BURDEN OF THEM TO THE BACKS OF THE TAXPAYERS.

It is strange, however, that our internationally minded citizens, whose concern for other nations is so lively and for their own country, so lukewarm, should not perceive the importance, FROM THE STANDPOINT OF INTERNATIONALISM, of the payment of the European war debts, which are owed to their country.

Good credit is as essential to a nation as to an individual. Repudiation of honest debts by a nation, even if it takes the false guise of a negotiated "cancellation" by a deceived and hoodwinked creditor, is FATAL TO THE HONOR AND CREDIT OF THE DEBTOR NATION.

It was the GOOD CREDIT of Great Britain, France and Italy that enabled them to turn in their hour of extremity to the United States, and obtain from us the loans of vast amounts which were vital to the preservation of their national existence.

Had there been any doubt in this country of the [illegible]tion as well as the ability of the borrowing nations to [illegible] their obligations, THE LOANS WOULD HAVE NOT BEEN MADE.

If international co-operation and, particularly, the principle of mutual support in the presence of worldwide danger, has any reality as a policy, THE FAITH AND CREDIT OF NATIONS MUST BE PRESERVED UNIMPAIRED.

If, in connection with the debts of Europe to the United States, there shall be written into the history of international dealings, a page of repudiation—and cancellation is but another word for repudiation—there is an END of credit between nations—an END of help.

Scuttling the Navy

Pacifism, Not Economy, Is Obvious Motive in Blows At Cruiser and Destroyer Programs

The Hoover administration's naval policy has taken an alarming turn. Its latest proposal—excused, as usual, by pleas of economy and world peace—amounts to SABOTAGE.

It contemplates delaying or scrapping the Navy Department's program to build our cruisers' strength up to the level assigned us in the London treaty. It also contemplates cutting in half the Navy's necessary destroyer program, half-heartedly maintained until now for the sake of employment. And it even considers abandoning, for paltry savings, the modernization of our old warships not signed away by our weak-minded treaty makers.

For Washington to say "economy" dictates this un-American policy fools nobody. The obvious and compelling motive is PACIFISM.

For it is not an accident that Washington on Tuesday scraps our Navy plans, and the League of Nations on Wednesday calls for a world truce on navy building—with Japan and France objecting.

Our ambassador at Geneva, to promote pacifism, goes so far even as to sacrifice by word our treaty right to build cruisers up to the London quot[illegible] The purpose, Washington asserts, is to have Japan and othe[illegible]ountries follow our example—when these very nations tell [illegible] League THEY WILL NOT. So we enter on a navy truce ALONE, with no assurance there will be a truce—with strong assurances there will not be.

And the only effect—worse still, what looks like the official intention—of our strange behaviour is automatically to SINK THE AMERICAN NAVY TO THE LEVEL OF A THIRD RATE POWER. For as the Navy League of the United States points out, merely by ceasing to build—if all interested nations cease—within one year Britain will rank first, Japan second and America third, because ships grow old and useless.

So ends in pacifist fatuity the 5-5-3 ratio of the London treaty, which was to make America second to none. So would end the "parity" of the London treaty.

A Grocery Store Survey

Pittsburgh Is Fortunate in Having Been Selected for Department of Commerce Study.

Pittsburgh can congratulate itself on having been chosen from a list of 14 applicant cities for the survey of retail food distribution to be conducted here under the direction of the United States Department of Commerce.

A similar survey was made in Louisville three years ago and was productive of beneficial results.

The plan is to study thoroughly the manner in which grocery stores are managed. Everything that contributes to profit or loss is subjected to scrutiny. In addition it is proposed to establish model stores for demonstration purposes.

Pittsburgh's grocers feel the survey will be a good thing for them. If it benefits them it will benefit Pittsburgh.

Awaiting the Deluge!

Evidently the Grand Old Party expects a STORM. And if the political weather prophets are right, there will BE a storm—when the next national election day comes around.

But will the G. O. P. Ark SURVIVE, with its strange assortment of legislative animals?

Or will the queer-looking boat be SUBMERGED in a sea of ballots?

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

This Modern Freedom

It's a dog's life, being a girl these days! It's doubling on the [illegible] and no pay for overtime.

* * *

* * *

Once upon a time, if a girl was pretty and well bred and knew how to hang onto a man's coat sleeve gracefully and to use her eyes and tinkle a piano she could get by and be normally popular and happy.

* * *

But NOW she has to be a "knockout" in order to attract any masculine attention. She must have "IT" and a permanent wave and an original "line" and enough clothes to stock a fashionable "shoppe," or she will scarcely be SEEN.

Once, if a girl had more than one or two beaus, she was regarded as a "belle." But now, unless she can keep at least half a dozen men in tow and have a different "date" for every evening in the week, she is accounted a "flop." And the thought of that makes every girl's blood congeal.

* * *

Once she knew that if she wanted romance and real love and marriage, she'd have to be sweet and sympathetic, but reserved and hard to kiss.

* * *

But now she doesn't know WHAT to do! If she refuses to "pet" she may be classed as a "Nice Nellie" or a "flat tire," and never invited out. And if she DOES pet, she is only one of a crowd, and will be mauled today and forgotten tomorrow.

* * *

She doesn't know whether to sit at home alone, and wait for the One Man to come along or to accept the unwelcome caresses of one bore after another until she finds the One Man. Then the black fear of not being a "hot" is forever hanging over her.

* * *

Mother could grow old and fat with perfect nonchalance—but those are crimes which nobody forgives these days. So Daughter must starve herself to a shadow and paint herself up like a fire-alarm to beat Time!

Oh yes, Mother had a cinch! It was infinitely easier to be a moron than it is to be a miracle!

* * *

Today, a girl must work like the proverbial bee in the office or shop all day—and look like the exotic lovely butterfly all evening.

* * *

She must be able to manipulate a typewriter or a high-powered car with one hand—and a lipstick with the other. To read law, philosophy, stenographic notes, galley proof or a card-index with one eye—and cast a come-hither look with the other. To be a hard, efficient snappy worker from nine to five—and a jolly little pal, a perfect thirty-six and Lorelei from eight until midnight!

* * *

Mueller Organized Study of Physiology

By Archibald Henderson

There are certain branches of knowledge which seem to grow by process of mere accretion. These facts, those data, the results of certain experiments, the findings of the laboratory—all these bits of information keep accumulating until a very considerable mass of information is available in a given field of knowledge. But a mass of disordered and separate facts do not constitute a science any more than a heap of stones makes a cathedral. What is needed is an organizing mind which correlates and associates these facts. Such a scientific organizer was Mueller, who brought order out of chaos and formulated binding principles and laws in the vast field of physiology.

Johannes Mueller was born at Coblenz, Germany, on July 14 1801. He was originally destined for the ministry, but soon abandoned that profession for medicine and biology. He studied at the University of Bonn, taking his degree there in 1822. After studying medicine and physiology at the University of Berlin, he returned to Bonn, becoming in turn tutor, assistant professor, and finally in 1830 professor in the University of Bonn. In 1833 he returned to Berlin, and took the chair of anatomy and physiology at the University there, retaining this post until his death on April 28, 1858.

Mueller's studies, like those of most physiologists, were very wide-ranging. He entered the field of comparative anatomy, studying [illegible] fishes and sea-urchins. He [illegible] extended study of cartilage, [illegible] firm elastic substance which [illegible]stitutes so much bodily tissue, [illegible]ally in early stages, and shows its cellular nature as well as the methods by which it is formed. As Van Wagener points out in Beacon Lights of Science, he discovered the preprephric ducts in the kidneys, explained the nature of hermaphroditism, laid the foundation of the present knowledge of the embryology and the metamorphoses of the echinoderms, discovered the lymph hearts of the amphibious animals, the micropyle of the eggs of fishes, and made clear many other obscure living structures and organs.

Mueller's Handbook of Human Physiology, which appeared in the thirties of the last century, ranks as a notable scientific work. His greatest contribution to science was the discovery of the "law of specific nervous energy." It states the remarkable truth that the sensations we experience depend upon the innate powers of the sensory centers concerned; so that if any agent excites the center, for vision, for example, vision is experienced. The city of Coblenz erected a monument to Mueller's memory in 1899.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

I used to believe we could Get Good.

I thought that if we made enough righteous decisions and gestures, goodness would become a habit . . . we would no longer want to be bad.

All around me I saw people who seemed to have reached that blissful state. Noble people. Who didn't lie or flirt in tempers, or act mean. But who, on the contrary, were always calm, strong, sweet, wise generous and refined, as befitted civilized gentlemen and ladies. How wonderful to be that way! To have no unworthy motives, not contemptible temptations—if only I could be like that!

That was how I thought once. Now I know I was wrong. Those people weren't really like that. Nobody is really like that. They hadn't Gotten Good. They just looked as if they had. And that was all anyone could do!

Now, don't misunderstand me. I'm not saying that there is no goodness . . . that seemingly righteous people are hypocrites. I'm just saying that you can't Get Good all through . . . so good that goodness becomes automatic. No matter how good you are, you could be bad without half trying!

Those Perfect People — they didn't [illegible] truth because they couldn't tell anything else. They weren't brave because they had no yellow streak. They weren't kind because they couldn't hate . . . or industrious because they doted on hard labor . . . or modest because they lacked egotism . . . or faithful because they were temptation proof.

Actually, they wanted to fib as much as I did! They wanted to fib even while they told the truth! They wanted to loaf, even while they worked! Their yellow streak was as wide as mine and their bump of conceit as great! And even the most faithful wives often dreamed of curly-headed tenors!

They hadn't Gotten Good. It was still as hard for them to be good as it was for me. They shared all my handicaps and temptations. YET THEY WERE GOOD IN SPITE OF THAT!

I'll confess, I was both surprised and shocked when I first discovered this fact. Being very young and idealistic, I thought that righteousness wasn't worth much unless it was 100 per cent. And I frankly doubted the honesty or courage or kindness of people who were inwardly longing to tell whoppers, run away or smack someone in the snoot. But eventually I saw things differently.

I saw that goodness is all the more beautiful and miraculous because it is mingled with so much badness.

How amazing that man should be good at all. Such a short time since we were all savages, running naked through the brush, lying, stealing, killing as naturally as we breathe. And now we wear pants! I tell the truth. But still there is a scattering of hair along our shins . . . AND STILL THERE IS THE PRICKLING OF HATE AND FEAR WITHIN OUR HEARTS.

Don't be surprised that there isn't more goodness in human nature. Be surprised that there's any at all.

Don't be discouraged because you're full of secret cussedness, even in your best moments. You'd be a freak if you weren't. And you have plenty of company, kid.

WHAT DO YOU KNOW?

By S. H. Connolly

Mark each statement as true or false:

1. The Bois de Boulogne is in Vienna.
2. The Eiffel Tower is the highest in the world.
3. Sarah Bernhardt is buried in Westminster Abbey.
4. The Peace Treaty of the Great War was signed in Paris.
5. The present Pope has been in office since 1922.
6. The Egyptian Pyramids were built to commemorate wars.
7. An allegory is a war song.
8. The Pacific Ocean was once called the South Sea.
9. A place for storing weapons is called an abattoir.
10. Bankruptcy is inability to pay debts.

Match correctly:

11. Milan	birthplace of Dante.
12. Genoa	built on small islands.
13. Florence	chief seaport of Italy.
14. Trieste	capital of Lombardy.
15. Venice	belonged to Austria until 1919.

Answers to today's test:

1. False (Paris). 2. True. 3. False (Paris, Pere Lachaise Cemetery). 4. False (Versailles, near Paris). 5. True. 6. False (tombs for kings). 7. False (poem with symbolic characters in it). 8. True. 9. False (arsenal). 10. True. 11. Capital of Lombardy. 12. Chief seaport of Italy. 13. Birthplace of Dante. 14. Belonged to Austria until 1919. 15. Built on small islands.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

By Time Unstained

This is the greatest love, the love that lives
Unchanged by changing time and circumstance,
That still a portion of its glamour gives
It lends to life adventure, strange and long.
Always a blessing by naught else conferred;
The hidden meaning of the spoken word.

No part is it have years, for it may be
The treasure of the heart, from youth to age,
Or but an hour's sudden ecstasy,
Obliterated by life's turning page.
The fair ideal, desired and unattained,

Isn't It So?

There is good in the worst of us, and bad in the best of us, and a few want to reform all of us.

The reason some married men fail to give their wives credit is because they want cash.

Sales Tax Advantage

Pennsylvania Senator Points Out Sound Quali[illegible] Bill to Be Introduced in Congress.

By DAVID A. REED

United States Senator From Pennsylvania. Written Expressly for Universal Service.

IT is axiomatic that the steadiest revenue comes fr[illegible] with the broadest base—that is to say, the more in[illegible] that are taxed and the more articles to which the tax[illegible] the less will be the fluctuation of the yield from year to [illegible]

Most of our income tax is paid by one-half of 1 per[illegible] of the population and the tax is based not on the amou[illegible] business they do, but on the marginal profit that they ac[illegible] The inevitable result is that in hard times the yield from[illegible] a tax dries up almost to the vanishing point.

Sales taxes are not new. We are paying them tod[illegible] high priced theater tickets, on gasoline, on tobacco prod[illegible] on steamship tickets and on revolvers. These taxes tha[illegible] are now paying range from 5 per cent to 125 per cent o[illegible] sales price.

MY proposal is to tax all or most of the thousands o[illegible] ticles that enter into commerce, but only at the very[illegible] rate of one-half of 1 per cent. It is not an experiment, f[illegible] this minute in Canada and in France substantially higher[illegible] taxes are being collected without injustice and without[illegible] plaint.

The first reaction of the politicians is that this is a[illegible] posal to tax the food and clothing of the poor and the ou[illegible] is that it will work a vast increase in the cost of living of[illegible] ordinary citizen. A moment's thought shows that this is n[illegible] true. If a man with an income of $2,000 per year spent e[illegible] cent of it for taxable articles, the total tax which he would[illegible] would be $10 per year if the rate were fixed, as I sugge[illegible] at one-half of 1 per cent.

Such a tax seems an outrage only to those who bel[illegible] that part of the population has a vested right to get its [illegible] ernment for nothing. We should remember that a person w[illegible] the same income in Great Britain is paying about $300 a [illegible] in income taxes.

THE yields to be anticipated from such a tax as I have s[illegible] gested would be about one billion and a quarter annu[illegible] if all retail sales were included, and this yield would be f[illegible] constant, for even in the hardest of times the amount of [illegible] sales runs about 80 per cent as much as in boom times.

The advantages to the business community are ob[illegible] because every merchant knows each day what his tax lia[illegible] is, whereas at the present time he cannot know it unt[illegible] books are made up at the end of the year.

There is the proposition in a nutshell. As a practical [illegible] ter, I think it has small chance of adoption in this coming [illegible] gress, and a good deal of missionary work will have to be [illegible] before it has a real chance.

At the same time, I believe in its essential soundness a[illegible] therefore, I think it will eventually win.

IN ATLANTIC CITY

By O. O. McIntyre

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 30.—One little incident of t[illegible] seaside sojourn stands out like a mountain peak in memor[illegible] While being driven with a party of friends to the theater l[illegible] night a sudden shower went suddenly Niagara and develop[illegible] into an engulfing cloudburst.

In no time at all streets were roaring and we sat looking foolish with the engine stopped and wheels submerged. All about people were abandoning cars and wading knee deep to safety. In a gulley ahead a taxi driver and his fare perched atop the cab. A mighta fine bodah of watah!

There was perhaps no great danger, yet at the time there were few who did not believe disaster was imminent. What was surprising was the unusual calm. Instead of hysteria, the spirit was one of skylark and wise cracking. I wonder if that isn't true in most cataclysms?

It is only fair to Atlantic City to chronicle such torrential exhibits are unusual. It was the first in memory of the oldest inhabitant. The customary weather is mildly seasonable, but high winds present a problem in door-slamming in water front hotels.

Every door has a plunger device. Otherwise it would be impossible for guests to sleep. Incidentally, there are perhaps more hotels here per capita than in any other spot on the globe. This does not refer to the mastodonic hospices flanking the faintly luminous splash of the sea, but to the countless inns running off from and in streets parallel to the boardwalk. While many are pretentious enough the majority are frame structures with courts and tiers of verandahs. They are huddled together in gingerbread array and with an astounding variety of nat[illegible]s.

I noticed one inn boasts of being under the management of "Mrs. O'Brien, formerly Mrs. Silverman." And while I did not stop to delve into the particulars of such nomenclature I suspected details that would have delighted the fancy of O. Henry.

Atlantic City lobbies bristle with that broken-sentenced jargon of the back stage. There are always shows in rehearsal for production on Broadway. Everybody connected with such enterprises is keyed up like a banjo string. In a week or so they will have the Broadway verdict. There is a saying: "If they laugh at [illegible] rehearsals, it's rotten." In other words, the successful sho[illegible] those looking worst in this tive period.

Among summer resident[illegible] are Hope Hampton and he[illegible] band, Jules Brulatour, whos[illegible] pitality is extended to all vi[illegible] celebrities of the theatrical, [illegible] and operatic stage. Miss Ha[illegible] ton's flair for dazzling be[illegible] clothes, together with the unu[illegible] titian tint of her hair and [illegible] 17-ounce snow-white Pomera[illegible] tucked under her arm form [illegible] the highlights of the Boar[illegible] promenade.

League Court Coercion

Austro-German Customs Union Doomed by Opposition Of France, Pro-League Paper Says.

Declaring "France gets what she wants," the Cincinnati Times-Star, a pro-League Court paper, referred editorially to the Austro-German customs union decision as follows:

"To call the abandonment of the Austro-German customs union a 'voluntary renunciation' is merely a polite way of speaking. Its doom was sealed in Paris by the opposition of France, expressed as soon as the proposal was announced. Whether or not the union violated the peace treaties—a point which has not yet been legally determined—it undoubtedly threatened the hegemony of France on the continent. And France, who holds the money bags, is now able to get practically what she wants."

The Reno (Nev.) Evening Gazette commented:

"Already the charge has been made that the smaller nations, who cast the deciding votes, joined with France in writing a political opinion, and seemingly that is what occurred. In other words, France, through her numerous alliances and by political trading, it is alleged, was able to gather in enough votes to win her case.

"The incident has not strengthened the Court in American eyes."
